'No doubt' Manson behind it – prosecutor

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP) — One of Charles Manson's prosecutors said Friday that he believes the convicted mass murderer masterminded the apparent assassination attempt on President Ford.

Deputy District Attorney Stephen Kay said there "is no doubt in my mind" that Manson was behind the incident involving Lynette (Squeaky) Fromme in Sacramento.

Miss Fromme was seized by officers Friday as she pointed a loaded pistol at Ford. Authorities said the thin redhead, who joined the Manson clan in 1967, was charged with attempted murder of the president.

"The Manson girls just don't act on their own, they act at the behest of Charles Manson," Kay said. "I think Charles Manson had a hand in it. It's very easy to slip messages in and out of prison."

$1 million bail for gun-girl

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A young woman pointed a loaded .45-calibre pistol at President Ford at arms-length range Friday but a Secret Service agent thwarted the apparent assassination attempt as she screamed: "It didn't go off!"

Authorities identified her as Lynette Alice Fromme, 26, and charged her with attempted murder of the president. She was described as a follower of Charles Manson, who was convicted in the bizarre, execution-style slayings of starlet Sharon Tate and six others in August 1969.

After her arraignment at the federal courthouse, bail was set at $1 million. No plea was entered and the arraignment was continued until next Thursday.

Attempted murder of the president is a federal offence, which carries a maximum penalty of life imprisonment.

Public Defender Richard Walker said he talked to Miss Fromme briefly and she was rational, but he refused to disclose anything about the conversation.

The complaint accused Miss Fromme only of pointing a pistol at the president, not of firing or squeezing the trigger. The complaint by Secret Service agents also said agents grabbed the pistol away from her. The pistol was found to be loaded with four live rounds in the clip, but no live round in the chamber to be fired next.

The evident assassination attempt, the first such episode in American politics since the May, 1972, shooting of Alabama Governor George Wallace, occurred as Ford shook hands along a walk on the park-like California capitol grounds.

Witnesses said Ford apparently was the first to see the gun, wielded by a red-haired woman standing close enough to touch him.

The chief executive flinched and paled, then Secret Service agent Larry Buendorf grabbed the loaded weapon with one hand and the woman with the other.

Ford later described the incident himself, saying:

"I saw a hand coming up between several others in the

Goncalves finally out

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Pro-Communist Gen. Vasco Goncalves, bowing to threats of civil war from his opponents, stepped down from power Friday in a major victory for moderates in Portugal's political crisis.

A communique issued at the end of a showdown meeting of the powerful armed forces assembly said the former prime minister "refused to accept" his new appointment as armed forces chief.

Three hours before the announcement, a pale and drawn Goncalves stormed out of the session, boycotted by both the army and air force who allied themselves with the moderates.

The moderate Popular Democratic Party attracted 30,000 persons at a rally late Friday night in the northern industrial city of Porto, scene of much anti-communist violence in the past few months.

Goncalves . . . full-scale rout

Goncalves' departure highlighted a full-scale rout of pro-communists from Portugal's left-wing military regime.

The 240-member assembly forming a new 21-man revolutionary council giving military moderates a decisive majority. Pro-communists previously dominated the council.

One leading moderate, Capt. Vasco Lourenzo, earlier warned that Portugal was heading toward civil war if the pro-communists insisted on keeping Goncalves as armed forces chief.

The communique did not mention the fate of the three-man ruling directorate which had been charged with turning Portugal into a Soviet-style state — a proposal which drew the ire of the moderates and forced the showdown.

Both the army and air force had demanded the ouster of Goncalves and his pro-communist policies as the price of their loyalty to the central government.

To drive their point home, the military moderates raised the spectre of a civil war.

"The country is in danger of a civil war, but we are doing all we can to avoid an armed conflict," Lourenzo said before the meeting.

Goncalves left the meeting

Europe's socialists form line

LONDON (UPI) — European socialist leaders, including four heads of government, elected former West German chancellor Willy Brandt Friday to head their committee to compaign for democracy in Portugal.

The Committee of Friendship and Solidarity with Democracy and Socialism in Portugal consists of Brandt, British Prime Minister Harold Wilson, Swedish Premier Olof Palme, Dutch Premier Joop den Uyl, Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky and French Socialist leader Francois Mitterrand.

Portuguese Socialist leader Mario Soares met with his socialist colleagues at No. 10 Downing Street.

"The aim of the committee, while avoiding any interference, is to work . . . nationally as well as internationally, for democracy and socialism in Portugal," a statement said.

"The great amount of goodwill which the rapid decolonization and the elimination of the fascist regime have created must not be erased by indifference for the wishes of a majority of the Portuguese people."

Bennett in Oak Bay apartment: Happy birthday from Barrett

NO PARTISAN POLITICS – BUT . . .

W.A.C. at relaxed 75: 'No one can ruin B.C.'

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

The walk is a little slower on the eve of his 75th birthday, but the mind of former premier W.A.C. Bennett is as sharp as ever.

Sitting in his modest Oak Bay apartment overlooking the sea, he's relaxed, articulate and looks in perfect health. His dark blue suit, the trademark of his 20 years in office, is immaculate and sports just a touch of color from a maroon tie.

He quietly lays down the ground rules before the interview begins. "No partisan politics. I don't mind talking about general philosophy, but I don't want the story to sound as though I'm opening an attack on anybody."

The familiar raspy voice brings back memories of a thousand earlier interviews when he held the reins of power.

Already the congratulatory messages are coming in, including a happy birthday wish from Premier Barrett. But does W.A.C. have a message for British Columbians?

He does and it's simple: "Be of good cheer, the best is yet to come."

What is the best? "A better life, a better way of life, in British Columbia."

When? "If you're referring to political parties, no political party can ruin British Columbia in three years. They can throw some sand in the gears, but they can't ruin us, this province is just too strong. They can't stop British Columbia."

We have promised to try to steer clear of politics, but here we are two or three minutes into the interview and already skating around the edge of what must be a series of political questions.

F.I.R., pulpmen cool to try by mediator

VANCOUVER (CP) — An industrial mediator has contacted B.C.'s forest unions and the industry, but two of the groups appeared cool Friday to third-party involvement.

Keith Bennett of Forest Industrial Relations, which negotiates for the industry, said his group is prepared to meet at any time with the unions, but is only prepared to clarify recommendations in a report by Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon.

And Reg Ginn of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada said a meeting held to clarify points in the report would be pointless because his union understands the report.

"At the moment we are interested in getting back to the bargaining table to make some sort of adjustment to the report to make it acceptable to the membership," Ginn said in an interview.

Industrial mediator Clark Gilmour refused comment Friday on his request to management and the unions, but an International Woodworkers of America spokesman said the union is aware Gilmour was asked by Labor Minister William King to intervene.

IWA regional president Jack Munro said he told Gilmour the union is interested in a meeting after the union's negotiating committee meets to discuss priorities.

He said the only means of settling the dispute is to find ways to change the report and make it acceptable.

Spokesmen for the Canadian Paperworkers Union were unavailable Friday.

Pulp workers, continuing their efforts to shut down the industry, halted operations Friday at Crown Zellerbach's Fraser Mills sawmill in Coquitlam and put about 650 IWA members out of work.

About 25,000 of the 29,000 IWA members on the coast are already out of work because of poor markets and picketing by the pulp unions.

All three unions have rejected Hutcheon's report, but the IWA executive has decided not to take its members on strike.

And Munro said Thursday the union's negotiation committee will seek further meetings with industry negotiators to discuss improvements to the report.

The industry has said it will not give better terms than the report but is prepared to clarify several items.

Suppliers recall Italian bean cans

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal health department warned consumers Friday not to eat Vitale Lupini beans because some cans are contaminated.

In a news release the department said Vancouver tests of some swollen 14-ounce cans of the beans, packed by Domenico Vitale, in Naples, Italy, contained bacterial contamination because they were under-processed.

Canadian distributors have started to recall the product from store shelves as a precautionary measure, although no illnesses have been reported.

The department advised consumers to return the beans if they have any at home.

Pension funds save New York

NEW YORK (UPI) — A $100-million transfusion from labor union pension funds into a nearly empty city treasury saved New York payroll and welfare cheques from bouncing Friday.

"The city is solvent — today," said budget director Melvin N. Lechner, following meetings of the funds' trustees, labor leaders and city officials.

With $120.5 million in obligations due Friday, New York faced the prospect of defaulting on a payroll for 9,815 sanitation men and at least 35,884 welfare cases if it had not secured the union leaders' co-operation.

In August, $115 million in state and city pension money was used to ease the city's cash problems.

Air collision kills four

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Four people were killed when two planes collided Friday, a mile from Chilliwack airport.

Witnesses said one plane came down on the other, shearing off its tail and sending it crashing into a cornfield, killing all four occupants.

The pilot, and sole occupant, of the other plane escaped serious injury. He landed about half a mile from the crash site.

front row and obviously there was a gun in that hand.

"Let me add, with great emphasis, this incident under no circumstances will prevent me or preclude me from contacting the American people as I travel from one state to another and from one community to another."

In Washington, Ford's wife Betty said after hearing about the incident: "It's something you just have to live with."

Ford shook a few hands in the Senator Hotel lobby before leaving Sacramento but he refrained from going into the crowds anywhere else after the morning incident. Several thousand persons saw him at McClellan air force base before his plane left for Washington.

Ford said the reaction of the agents protecting him was instantaneous and effective.

White House press secretary Ron Nessen said the gun was only two feet from Ford when Buendorf seized the hand and held it aloft.

Sacramento police officers said, Buendorf's hand was cut, indicating that the woman may actually have pulled the trigger but that his hand may have blocked the hammer from striking the firing pin.

Eyewitnesses said she shouted: "Don't worry. It didn't go off, fellows. It didn't go off." A reporter's tape recording showed also that she yelled:

"This country is a mess! The man is not your president!"

Miss Fromme was described as being one of four Manson clan members who were sentenced to 90 days in jail in April, 1971, for attempting to keep a witness from testifying in the Tate murder trial by giving her a hamburger laced with LSD.

Two months ago, she told a reporter in an interview that she and other Manson followers were upset because Ford was continuing the same economic and social policies of his predecessor Richard Nixon. "If Nixon's reality wearing a new Ford face continues to run the country against the law, our homes will be bloodier than the Tate-LaBianca houses and My Lai put together," she said.

Ford went on to deliver a prepared speech to the California legislature which dealt, ironically, with violent crime. He appealed for mandatory prison terms for persons convicted of serious offences involving firearms, airline hijacking, kidnapping and drug trafficking.

The president told the state legislators that there is a "truly alarming increase in violent crime throughout this country" which can be "brought under control only by the best concerted efforts of all levels of government."

He also noted that most serious crimes are committed by repeaters and said it is time "to give equal weight on the scales of justice to the rights of the innocent victims of crimes of terror and violence."

The speech capped a grueling, two-day West Coast speechmaking journey that also included appearances in Seattle and Portland to raise funds for the Republican party.

Though Ford suffered no physical harm, it was clear that he knew instantly that his life was threatened. As Nessen put it: "The president's smiling face suddenly paled."

about two hours before the final communique announced his ouster.

President Francisco da Costa Gomes called the 240-man assembly into session at Tancos army base despite the boycott by two of the three armed services and a warning that such a move would be his "last political act."

The socialist newspaper Luta described the situation at the base about 80 miles north of Lisbon as "boiling." But a check of key military headquarters and bases around the country did not show any units on alert.

Then the Popular Democrats announced they would hold a major anti-communist rally in the city of Porto.

"The crisis exists and we are trying to resolve it without allowing the country to fall into a very large convulsion," Lourenzo said outside the assembly meeting.

The key to the explosive dispute between the two military factions was the political future of Goncalves, the former prime minister who was named to head the armed forces and Portugal's revolution.

W.A.C. at relaxed 75

Is he suggesting that Premier Barrett, having just completed his third year in office, might be considering going to the people and, in that event, heading for defeat?

Consummate politician that he still is, he avoids the partisan answer.

"If I were him, I'd have gone this year. I would have been long gone. It's true the constitution permits him to go for five years, but there is no way, when you are in power, that you should go for five. That's why I always went to the people after three. The leader should welcome meeting the electorate. He shouldn't be afraid.

"If the leader believes in democracy, then he has to believe that the day the people no longer want him as their leader they should have the opportunity to tell him so. Only a frightened man hangs onto power."

He goes on to say that he is entitled to speak with some authority. "After all I went to the people eight times, won seven and lost one. That's not a bad record."

He still believes that his defeat in August, 1972, was directly attributable to the provincial press and a militant teacher body.

"In March the polls told us we would win," he says quietly. "But the press was mad at us because we had cut out liquor and tobacco advertising and the teachers had a million-dollar fund to defeat us because of our wage-restraint policies.

"I think many of them realize now that our 6.5-per-cent ceiling on wage increases was a good move to try to halt inflation. But the teachers didn't like it, nor did a lot of other people at the time."

Did he feel any bitterness in defeat?

"Bitterness? No, my friend, bitterness only consumes yourself. I have never felt any bitterness towards my political opponents and I don't think my opponents have ever felt any bitterness towards me. We're still good friends.

"But the defeat was good for our party, you know. We had been in office too long. And it was, and is, good for the people to see first hand what the alternative is."

It has been suggested, and those of us who observe the political scene have observed, that Premier Barrett patterns many of his actions and attitudes on yours. How does that make you feel?

The direct answer is avoided but the reply is quick: "There's one lesson he didn't learn, that was to show restraint. That was the number one lesson he should have learned. He's learning it now, but only because he's being forced to.

"This government has caused most of its own problems. It's just cause and effect. I don't want to repeat myself, but we tried to hold things in check with our 6.5-per-cent wage increase rules.

"If the people had backed me we wouldn't have stopped inflation, but we would have held it in check. But the first thing this government did was take the lid off, give themselves and just about everybody else they could, huge raises in pay.

"You can't control or check inflation that way. Don't forget, what you sow you reap. He sowed, he's reaping now."

He slides into his favorite theme: "You build a home to protect your family. That's what I tried to do while I was in office. I tried to build a home to protect the family of B.C. I tried to build a home strong enough to withstand the storm we all knew was coming.

"I even had a few 'nuts' in the basement, you know. Even squirrels do that. But inside of three years they have made it a shambles."

How does he see the general state of the economy in B.C.?

The answer is terse: "It's in a mess. This government has been the best government ever — for Alberta and the Yukon. Fisheries, mining, forestry are all in trouble. The forest industry shutdown is just stupid."

What could any government do to stop the strikes and lockouts?

"They could have left our legislation alone. You can agree or disagree with the way we set it up. You can change it if you don't like it, but you have to replace it with something equally good.

"When you have two teams playing hockey you need rules and you need a referee. Somebody has to blow the whistle. If you need that sort of thing for sport, how much more important is it to have a referee when you are dealing with the economy.

"I think it's silly when the minister of labor says both sides in a dispute will have to work out a solution. Both sides have their demands, both sides have their rights and one of those rights is the right to prosper. But they are so involved in their own individual areas that they'll never get together.

"That's where you need a neutral referee. You must have someone like that or you have what we have today. Chaos."

Does he think Social Credit has fully recovered from the disarray left following the August, 1972, defeat?

"There wasn't any disarray," he says. "after we were defeated I advised the party to just sit back and rest for a while. We did that and now the party has a new leader.

"We came from nowhere in 1952, remember. And we stayed in power for 20 years. Our party is a populist party, that's the way it should be. Our party, and I'm just a private member, is really the people's party."

Premier Barrett says that once again the Social Credit party has fallen into the hands of a group of businessmen in Vancouver. Any comment?

"Social Credit has never been in the hands of the business interests. When we were first elected we did it without any business vote at all. It's silly to talk about a business party against a labor party. We are for all sections of the community.

"I coined a little phrase when I first became premier. 'Fair treatment for all, special privileges for none.' Social Credit still believes that."

'Squeaky' was early member of Manson gang

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Lynette Alice Fromme, seized by authorities Friday after she pointed a loaded pistol at President Ford, was one of the earliest members of what came to be known as the Charles Manson family.

She displayed her loyalty to Manson in 1970 during the trial at which he was convicted for murder, branding her forehead with a X burned into the skin. Prosecutor Vincent Bugliosi wrote that this was one of the rituals for new members of the family "complete to tasting the blood as it ran down their faces."

Bugliosi, in his book Helter Skelter, described her as being "on a power-trip — acting as Manson's unofficial spokesman, running the family in his absence."

Miss Fromme, now 26, was the daughter of an aeronautical engineer and came from a well-to-do southern California family. She attended and dropped out of junior college.

The red-haired, freckle-faced Miss Fromme said in an interview in July that Manson blamed former president Nixon for his fate and believed Ford was continuing Nixon's policies.

Miss Fromme testified at the Manson trial that her father kicked her out of the house when she was 17. She joined Manson in 1967 and he gave her the name "Squeaky" because of her tiny voice.

She was one of the Manson followers who camped outside the courthouse during much of the trial. "We will remain here until our brothers and sisters are set free," she said.

When seized Friday, she wore a long brown dress and red turban. In a July interview, she said:

"We're nuns now and we wear red robes. We're waiting for our Lord and there's only one thing to do before He comes off the cross and that's clean up the earth.

"Our red robes are an example of new morality. We must clean up the air, the water and the land . . . . They're red with the sacrifice, the blood of the sacrifice."

Miss Fromme and Sandra Good, another original member of the Manson family, have been living in Sacramento for two years, at first hoping to be closer to Manson who was in Folsom prison serving a life sentence for the 1969 murders of actress Sharon Tate and six other persons.

He was later moved to San Quentin near San Francisco, but the girls remained in Sacramento.

Your good health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell me how you catch hepatitis, and how long it takes to get over it? — Mrs. J.S.

There are two types. The more common is acute infectious hepatitis, caused by the hepatitis A virus, and serum hepatitis which is caused by the B virus.

The first type (infectious hepatitis) is contracted by consuming food or water that is contaminated. The virus can be excreted in the stool. It can be transferred by food handlers careless about washing their hands, and this can happen in your own kitchen as well as in restaurants. This applies especially to food that is uncooked such as fresh fruits and vegetables, and to shellfish and oysters (raw) obtained from contaminated waters. Cooking destroys the virus.

The incubation period for infectious hepatitis is from two to six weeks, and thus the patient may not be able to trace the source of infection very easily.

Serum hepatitis has an even longer incubation period — from four weeks to six months. This is the type commonly contracted via the blood stream by injections with contaminated needles or by blood transfusions from affected donors. It must be emphasized that blood donors are screened very carefully, and those with a history of hepatitis are rejected.

Pubs can't be hasty in refusing hirsute

VANCOUVER (CP) — People cannot be refused service in a beer parlor just because they have long, unkept hair, a three-man board of inquiry has ruled.

In a decision released Friday, the three-member board found in favor of Doug Oram and Marian McLaren, both of Silverton, B.C., who had agreed with B.C. human rights commission officer Maurice Guibalt to test a complaint against the Lucerne public house in New Denver.

They were awarded costs of $375 on grounds that the complainants' long hair was not reasonable cause for the hotel to refuse them service.

The couple complained that a waitress at the hotel in southeastern B.C. refused to serve them beer and said something about them being dirty and having their hair uncombed.

Supermarket union sees long shutdown

VANCOUVER (CP) — The dispute which closed 125 Greater Vancouver supermarkets Friday is likely to be lengthy, says union spokesman George Johnston.

The food industry locked out the unions when they did not respond to a council ultimatum that the stores be given three days' advance notice of any picket action. Supermarkets claimed they couldn't remain open under the daily threat of being picketed.

Mr. Johnston said the unions could not agree to such an arrangement and would not agree to binding arbitration because they are opposed to compulsion.

"We've been through direct bargaining, mediation and an industrial inquiry commission that sat for six weeks without resolving the situation," said Mr. Johnston, president of the meatcutters' local of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers.

Involved in the dispute are the B.C. Food Industry Labor Relations Council — the employers' group — the meatcutters local, Bakery Workers Union, Local 468, and 3,500 members of the Retail Clerks Union, Local 1518.

Meanwhile some of the larger food outlets not involved in the dispute were jammed with shoppers. Most of the stores in the dispute are operated by Safeway Canada Ltd. and Super-Valu.

Workers are on strike against only one council member, Weston's Ltd. However, the Aug. 22 strike was followed by a lockout of bakers at three other wholesale bakeries and 42 supermarket bakeries.

Then the 700 meatcutters issued strike notice at 21 Super-Valu stores, after which they were locked out at all supermarkets.

The meatcutters and retail clerks have rejected an industry offer of a $1.30 an hour increase in contracts to run slightly less than one year.

The bakers have turned down a proposed wage increase of $1.49 an hour. This rate increase is equivalent to the other offers because the bakers have a shorter work week.

The weekly raise offered all three unions works out to $52. The industry also proposed an improvement of $21 a week in fringe benefits.

General clerks currently earn $5.95 an hour, meatcutters $6.65 and bakers $6.92.

The food council calculated the unions' total demands as an increase in wages and fringe benefits of 76.2 per cent.

Former MP Byrne dies at age 64

VANCOUVER (CP) — James A. Byrne, former Liberal MP for Kootenay East, died early Friday in hospital following a lengthy illness. He was 64.

Byrne will perhaps best be remembered for an altercation during the 1965 debate over the new Canadian flag during which his nose was broken by Conservative MP Douglas Alkenbrack.

Alkenbrack may have won the fight, but the Tories lost the battle.

Byrne, born in Grand Rapids, Minn., of Canadian parents, came to Canada at an early age. His family moved in the early 1920s to Creston, B.C., where he was educated.

In 1935, he moved to Kimberley where he worked as a miner for Cominco Ltd. He served as president of the local union for four years before taking a leave of absence from the company to enter politics.

Byrne was first elected in 1949 and served until 1958 when the Liberals were ousted by the Conservatives under John Diefenbaker. He was re-elected in 1962 but retired from politics in 1968 for health reasons.

Byrne was appointed to the Immigration Appeal Board in 1968 and for the past two years served as vice-chairman in charge of its Vancouver office.

Mr. Byrne is survived by his wife Margaret, of North Vancouver; four children and five grandchildren.

RCMP shoting death

Victim impaired—doctor

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A man fatally shot by an off-duty RCMP constable July 25 had consumed enough alcohol to impair his judgment, a coroner's jury was told Friday.

Pathologist Dr. Thomas Harmon said the body of William Miles Hamilton of North Vancouver showed a blood alcohol reading of .16 and a .24 alcohol reading in the urine.

He testified on the second day of an inquest into the death of Hamilton, 22, shot by Constable Garry Mydlak who testified Thursday that the shooting happened after he left his nearby home to investigate sounds of squealing car tires and two men arguing.

Mydlak said he shot Hamilton when the man attacked him with a wrench while he was attempting to arrest Hamilton's cousin for impaired driving.

Dr. Harmon, under questioning by counsel for Hamilton's parents, agreed Friday that two bullets had caused extensive injuries to Hamilton's heart and liver.

He agreed they had splayed out in a "mushroom-like" effect, and that bullets that mushroom tend to do more damage.

Constable Ron Casey earlier testified that he went to the shooting and was told by Mydlak that Bruce Edgar, Hamilton's cousin, was under arrest as a suspected impaired driver.

Casey said Edgar asked why Hamilton wasn't being given medical attention and was told he was dead.

Cpl. Alvin Brown said that when he arrived at the scene he asked Mydlak what happened and was told Mydlak was attempting to arrest Edgar when Hamilton drove up and started to give him a bad time.

Cpl. Brown said Mydlak was not given a breath test because there was no indication that he had been drinking.

Brown said he examined Hamilton's body but did not see a wrench.

When Brown said he was embarrassed at not seeing the wrench, the Hamilton family lawyer said another conclusion is that the wrench might not have been there.

But Const. William Thordarson said he saw a crescent wrench lying in a pool of blood besides Hamilton's body.

RICHARD BOWER — Publisher and Editor-in-Chief

Autocrat in Ottawa

TWO EVENTS IN LATE AUGUST confirmed in the minds of many Canadians the belief that this country is governed by the most arrogant prime minister in its history.

First was the appointment of former communications minister Gerard Pelletier as ambassador to France.

Second was the appointment of Pierre Juneau to succeed him. Mr. Juneau, formerly chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, is not even a member of the House of Commons.

Cabinet postings of this nature are by no means unprecedented. W. L. Mackenzie King, when he was prime minister, called General A. G. L. McNaughton to succeed Col. James Ralston as minister of defence during the controversy over the use of "home defence" conscripts for reinforcements in units overseas. The procedure, of course, requires confirmation of the minister at a by-election, something that General McNaughton was never able to accomplish. But in this particular case, Mr. Mackenzie King was faced with a crisis and there was ample excuse for his decision—if not justification.

It was an instance of expediency when a leader faced a dangerously divided country.

In 1957 John Diefenbaker, then prime minister, appointed Sidney E. Smith as minister of external affairs. He felt he had no one suitable for the post among elected members. Mr. Smith's appointment was confirmed in a by-election.

But Mr. Juneau's appointment is a piece of patronage that Pierre Trudeau freely admits.

The new minister, says Mr. Trudeau, during a long career in federal agencies "has proved his loyalty to the government." And besides, "he is a Quebecer with very ancient and deep roots." What more could be wanted?

But if the Juneau appointment rankles, Mr. Pelletier's reward for services rendered is even more distasteful. There are plenty of people in the department of external affairs people who have made diplomacy their career, who could expect to receive the ambassadorial plums as they become available. These professionals are angry and resentful, as well they might be; and the appointment of politicians over their heads will have an inevitable effect on morale and consequently on efficiency in the department.

Mr. Pelletier's is not an isolated case. Government leader in the Senate and a long-time minister, Paul Martin has gone to London as Canadian high commissioner.

Lucien Lamoureux, former Speaker and loyal Liberal, is the ambassador to Belgium.

Leo Cadieux, former defence minister, was ambassador to France before Mr. Pelletier's appointment.

On top of all this it is expected that Jean-Luc Pepin, trade minister defeated in the 1972 election, will be given the coveted Tokyo ambassadorship.

Mr. Trudeau, the man who was so anxious to impress Canadians with his humility and sensitivity when he was in a minority government position in 1972-73, is back on his high horse, more than ever disdainful of criticism and impervious to protest.

The smaller bangs

IT IS HARD TO IMAGINE a limited, tactical nuclear weapon war such as the United States seems to be increasingly inclined to contemplate. Common sense suggests that either side if it saw it was losing ground would be sorely tempted to escalate its efforts, and to strike first with the big, strategic, multi-headed missiles which both the United States and the Soviet Union have developed, each head guidable to a separate target. And it is a welcome thought that the big nuclear weapons, the potential destroyers of bases or metropolises, are still deterrents, and that nuclear submarines and their missiles can guarantee retaliation against the first-strike attacker even if land-based missiles are wiped out.

The Trident missile submarine fleet which seems certain now to be established at Bangor, Wash., in the Hood Canal about 60 miles southwest of Victoria will fit into this deterrent category. The Trident missiles are of long-range design and enormous power: they could reach targets from the Bangor base but some of the submarines will always be at sea in various parts of the Pacific or beyond.

There have been objections on both sides of the border to the Bangor operation, on environmental, anti-bomb and safety grounds, and the latest is from the B.C. Teachers' Federation on the basis that it will become a target of any nation contemplating a nuclear attack on the United States, "placing Vancouver and Victoria under a nuclear sword of Damocles."

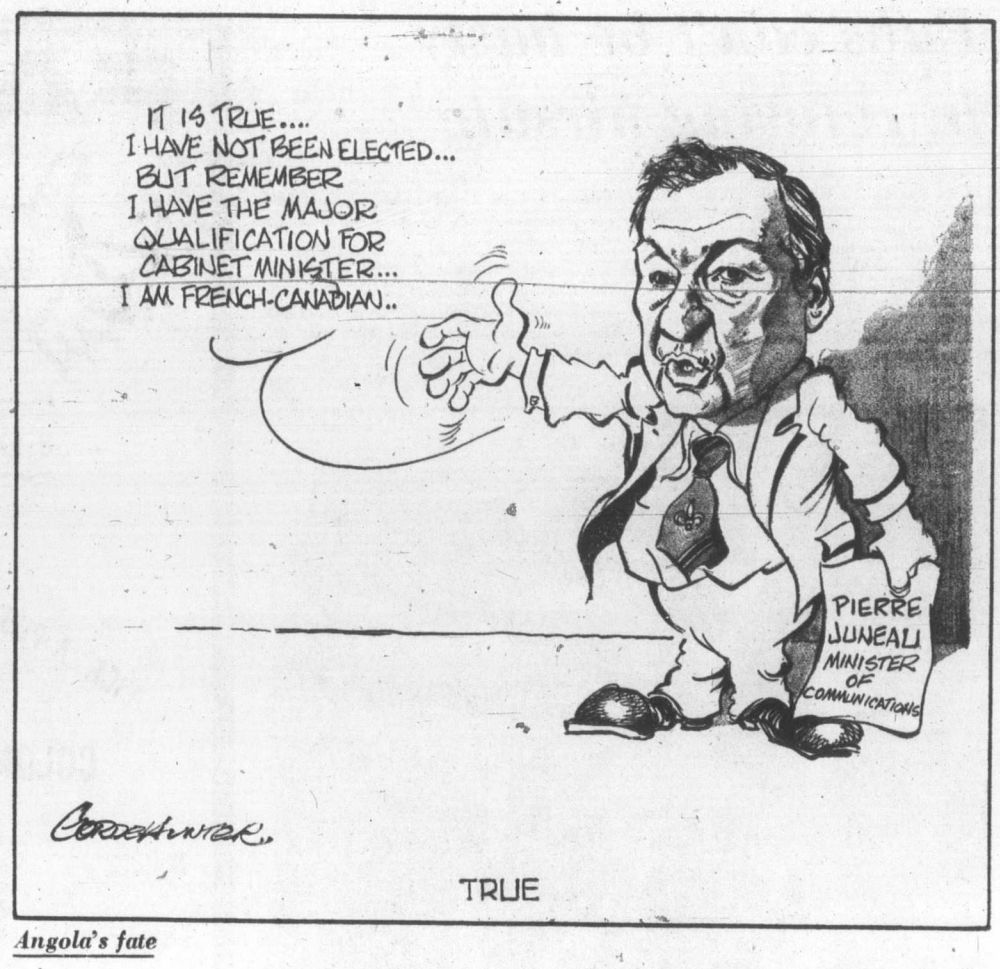
This is a reasonable surmise, if ever the deterrents cease to work. But in that case the base would hardly be the sole target in this area for the attacker, who would want to close off all possible avenues of retaliation. The Strait of Juan de Fuca itself could be a candidate for nuclear mining or depth-bombing.

And here one comes back to the smaller tactical weapons, which apparently are deployed already on both super-power sides in great numbers aboard surface ships and submarines, in aircraft and at land sites or in mobile launchers.

If the thought of a big bang at Bangor is disquieting, it's not exactly comfortable to think of lesser explosions from tactical "nukes" closer to home, either.

The Christian Science Monitor recently listed a few of the main U.S. weapons of this kind: the surface-to-surface Lance, range 70 miles, warhead yield up to 50 kilotons; the surface-to-surface Honest John, range 25 miles, yield up to 100 kilotons; the surface-to-surface Pershing, range 450 miles, yield up to 400 kilotons; the surface-to-surface Sergeant, range 85 miles, yield up to 100 kilotons.

The bomb that destroyed Hiroshima had a yield of about 20 kilotons.



Angola's fate

An economic wasteland

By JOHN BORRELL from Luanda

The sound of gunfire is rare in Luanda now that the Marxist Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola is in control of the capital, but there is a new noise which could ultimately prove more damaging to Angola than even the bitter rivalry between the three nationalist movements.

It is the sound of white Portuguese hammering lids on wooden packing cases destined first for the crowded docks and eventually, providing ships can be found, for Portugal. More than 80 per cent of Angola's estimated white population of 400,000 has either already left or is in the process of leaving and they are taking not only their possessions but also their skills with them.

★ ★ ★

The consequences of the mass exodus are becoming increasingly apparent and if Angola is not already an economic wasteland then it is rapidly becoming one.

The condition of Luanda is symptomatic of the country's malaise. Rotting rubbish lies piled high in the streets and if you walk around any residential area the first thing that strikes you is the pungent smoke from heaps of burning garbage.

The roads are rapidly becoming pot-holed and dangerous and it is perhaps only the serious fuel shortage which is keeping cars off the roads that is preventing them from becoming completely impassable.

Queues start forming at 4 a.m. outside food shops, especially those selling scarce commodities like bread and sugar. In the central square outside the main post office black marketeers will openly offer between four and five times the official rate for any hard currency.

★ ★ ★

Like a toothache, these are merely the symptoms of decay: since Angola's whole economic system is now rotten nothing can be done to save the tooth.

Production of coffee, Angola's biggest foreign currency earner after oil, will fall by at least 60 per cent this year and there might not be any Angolan coffee at all next year.

Fighting in the south has closed the railway line to Zambia and Zaire and unless one of the nationalist movements scores some spectacular military victories there is unlikely to be any revenue from the line for some time.

There is hardly a business in Angola which is not bankrupt or on the verge of bankruptcy and many manufacturing concerns are having to close down because of a shortage of raw materials. Nobody is prepared to export to Angola unless they receive hard currency in advance and there is hardly a businessman here who believes it worth while spending hard cash to bring goods into the country.

For as long as Angola remains Balkanized under the three movements there is little that can be done even to begin repairing the damage which, even at this stage, is so serious that it will take years to put the country back on its feet.

All this might well suit the Left-leaning MPLA. If your goal is to restructure society completely, then perhaps the best place to start from is scratch.

The MPLA, now in firm control of Luanda and possibly also the port of Lobito, clearly intends to be the only movement in a position to accept Angola's independence from the Portuguese on November 11. By controlling Lobito the MPLA has cut off the easiest supply route to Nova Lisboa, where its rivals, UNITA and the FNLA (National Union for the Total Independence of Angola and National Front for the Liberation of Angola), are still trying to keep the idea of a transitional coalition government alive.

Without the port, UNITA can have little hope of setting up an independent state in southern Angola, and indeed without the port its very survival is threatened. UNITA is the smallest of the three movements and it badly needs arms and ammunition.

The MPLA's strategy is clear. Now that it controls the ports it is going to try to spread its influence into the ethnic bases of the other two movements — the Bakongo country in the north and the Ovimbundu area of the south.

It could take a long time to achieve these goals but of the three movements the MPLA is now in the best position to conquer Angola by force — and it is force which will decide who inherits the country from the Portuguese.

While consolidating its military position, the MPLA is at the same time tightening its control over what departments of government still exist. It is establishing particularly tight control over communication and propaganda outlets with the obvious intention of persuading people, both in Angola and abroad, that it speaks for Angola.

Yet for all the apparent advantages in holding Luanda and Lobito, the cities could well turn out to be a millstone around the MPLA's neck. With Luanda at least fast becoming an economic desert even many of the MPLA's staunch supporters may be less keen on revolutions when the food runs out, as it surely must before long.

Foray into absolutism

India, Indira and democracy

By EDGAR S. EFRAT

The sudden demise of what was left of the Westminster system in India came as a surprise to no one. The British parliamentary system has never been successfully exported. The so called "rights of Englishmen," basic liberties, such as freedom from arbitrary arrest, trial by jury, freedom of the press, came to a swift end for 650 million Indians when by instigation of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, All-India Radio announced on July 2: "The president, V. V. Giri, has proclaimed a state of emergency. This is nothing to panic about."

The immediate results were nation-wide mass arrests of about one thousand political opponents, a total muzzling of the local and foreign press, and a totalitarian state-like confirmation by what was left of the national legislature. Her party controls 355 of the 516 seats.

★ ★ ★

An African newspaper had an apt cartoon. It showed Mrs. Gandhi in front of a prison cage, labelled "The Opposition" with a chin-scratching Richard Nixon in the background: "Now why did I not think of that?" Gandhi now, like Nixon, last year, is identifying her office with her person, to the detriment of the basic concept "that the government is of law, not of persons."

Indira Gandhi, 58, daughter of Jawaharlal Nehru, India's first prime minister, acceded to power in 1966 on a platform of democratic socialism, six years after her husband's death. She found her own political instrument, The New Congress Party — and to many of her followers she can do no wrong.

This in spite of an unemployment rate of 35 per cent, in a population that increases by 13 million yearly.

★ ★ ★

The present foray into absolutism—not unknown in underdeveloped nations—began when the court in Allahabad ("City of God") found her guilty of campaign fraud in the 1971 elections, and while reserving judgment pending appeal, barred her from voting in Parliament, although permitting her to continue her prime - ministership without pay.

The court verdict seemed to be only the last, albeit drastic, factor in Indira Gandhi's search for absolute power. Among other factors were the recent wave of political violence, such as the assassination of Transport Minister Mishra in January, and the attempt on the life of the chief justice in April. Cynics see Indira's hand in these.

The verdict also resulted in a massive Mohandas Gandhi ("The Saint") style civil disobedience campaign against her, against materialism, nuclear bombs (recently developed by India with indirect Canadian aid) and public corruption. The leader of this movement, an old passive fighter for India's independence, 72-year-old Jayaprakash Narayan, is in prison, together with his entourage which even included about 30 members of Mrs. Gandhi's Congress Party.

★ ★ ★

India's poverty is notorious. What is less known is that one-fifth of India's population is effectively outside the law. They are Harijans, The Untouchables. Their non-status dates back 25 centuries and is tied to their employment in impure tasks, street cleaners, fishermen, butchers, laundrymen, etc.

They are prohibited from owning land—and are easy prey to brahmin landlords and employers. Although nominal legislation was enacted to protect them, they are a major source of social discontent in India. They are volatile and take to the streets on any pretext. They have nothing to lose.

Better organized political opposition emanates from Indian states, part of the federal system, that have governments opposed to Indira Gandhi. Foremost among these is Gujarat state, one of India's largest, which is on the verge of open rebellion. Demonstrations requiring the use of police weapons also took place in Bombay and Poona.

Indian politics, especially in foreign affairs, were characterized since independence in 1947 by a double standard: endorsement of United Nations actions everywhere (India sent troops to support the UN in the Congo and in the Middle East)—except when resolutions opposed Indian occupation in Kashmir. Jawaharlal Nehru preached nonviolence, but invaded Goa. He advocated the right of self-determination, but refused a plebiscite for Goa's Portuguese.

★ ★ ★

Indira Gandhi steadfastly supports Arab objections to Israeli occupation of disputed territories, but did not hesitate to oust Pakistan by force from Bengal. Her abrogation of democracy in India is the logical sequence.

The outcome of the charges against the prime minister remain to be seen. Dominique Lapierre and Larry Collins, authors of a recent book on India, Cette Nuit La Liberte (English edition Freedom at Midnight to appear in September), state: "The fact that there can be a court ruling against Indira Gandhi shows up the supreme heritage of British colonization of India — democracy." Regrettably, they will have some explainaing to do.

Case of British MP

Spotlight on the bail system

By ROBERT CHESSHYRE from London

The case of John Stonehouse, the British member of Parliament who faked his own drowning and re-appeared in Australia under an assumed name, may eventually prove to have achieved lasting benefits in a totally unexpected direction—the reform of the system of granting bail to defendants and conditions inside remand prisons.

Stonehouse, awaiting trial on charges of theft, forgery and fraud, was last week released on £40,000 bail (£10,000 on his own recognizance and two sureties of £15,000 each) after several weeks remand in Brixton prison, south London. Throughout his imprisonment he and his family have kept the issue of his remand constantly in the public mind.

What they have been saying agrees with the demands of the penal reformers, who believe that the over-use of the remand to prison of defendants and the restrictive rules under which they then live are among the major ills of the British prison system.

★ ★ ★

One in eight prisoners in the currently grossly overcrowded system is unsentenced. At the end of last year their total reached 5,481—the highest number this century. The report of the Prison Department published a few weeks ago showed that two out of five of these unsentenced people were not eventually sent to prison for their crimes.

During the past year 51,500 people were sent to prison before being tried, and another 23,000 after conviction but before sentence. Of the untried prisoners, 2,000 were acquitted.

These statistics have to be set against a background of a prison population rising so fast that it is within 1,500 of the "bust" point of 42,000, at which it would be hard for the prison department to cope any longer. Most of the penal reform groups have been advancing plans to keep people out—such as fresh forms of supervised control in the community.

★ ★ ★

The Home Secretary, Roy Jenkins, who is ultimately responsible for the system, is accused of failing in his accepted liberalism when it comes to prisons.

The over-use of remand is damaging to the defendant, and wasteful of extremely limited resources. It now costs £2,210 a year to keep a man inside, a conservative estimate for a remand prisoner who must be escorted to and from court evey week until he is committed for trial, and who has privileges—a daily 15-minute visit and the right to have food sent in—that consume scarce staff resources.

One of John Stonehouse's complaints was unique—that prison censorship of his mail was a breach of his parliamentary privilege—but others chief of these is that it is extremely difficult for a prisoner to prepare a defence while locked in jail.

In Brixton, where there are about 750 remand prisoners at any one time, there are only 13 interview rooms, so lawyers can only see their clients irregularly and then often have to wait at the prison up to an hour. The prisoner feels frustrated, convinced that at liberty he could make a better job of chasing up defence witnesses than his solicitor can.

Conditions are often highly degrading. Remand prisoners are frequently kept in the oldest part of the prison, and there is little in the way of facilities for them. Work—if it is available—is likely to be very negative, cleaning, for example, and recreation facilities non-existent.

In a strange way remand can inure people to the horrors of imprisonment. One ex-prisoner said: "You only fear the unknown. Once you've done a few weeks on remand, you've probably adapted to the routine and become partially institutionalized."

Visiting, although allowed daily, is demeaning for relatives, who must see the accused through a grille and often have long waits. Remand of a man subsequently not sent to jail probably costs him his job and throws the family on to social security benefits.

A woman who visits Brixton as a social worker estimated that perhaps a quarter of prisoners should never have been remanded in custody. Other penal reformers put it as high as a half.

★ ★ ★

Reformers argue that too little is known about the three chief objections to bail: that the accused will disappear, that he will interfere with witnesses, and that he will commit further offences. (All three reasons were raised when the three people accused of damaging the cricket test match pitch at Leeds were denied bail).

They advocate a system such as the one pioneered in Manhattan by the Vera Foundation. Each accused person is given a points score, based on his provable circumstances: how long he has lived at one address, how long he has been in the same job, whether he has a family and so on. On this basis it has been possible to increase the numbers released on bail and reduce the percentage who fail to turn up for their trials.

★ ★ ★

Under recent pressure the home secretary promised a bill in the House of Commons aimed at improving the application of bail. The granting of bail is very haphazard, with different courts adopting different criteria for apparently similar cases. In John Stonehouse's case there would seem to be little change in his circumstances last week compared with the seven previous occasions he has sought bail. His lawyer had not even laid on potential sureties—normal practice when bail is expected.

When the House of Commons reassembles on Oct. 13 it is doubtful whether the Speaker will allow Stonehouse to make a personal statement about his legal predicament. A committee of MPs, who have already recommended his expulsion, feel that nothing done or said in Parliament should jeopardize Stonehouse's eventual trial.

However, he will be able to take part in the normal business of the House, subject to the fact that he must report daily to the police. It seems certain that Stonehouse will use such time as remains to him as an MP to press for reform of bail—the one subject on which he without question now knows more than any of his fellow members.

President William McKinley of the United States was shot by Leon Czolgosz, a young anarchist, 74 years ago today — in 1901 — and died eight days later. Czolgosz may have been weak-minded but little is known because he was executed after a speedy trial. The assassination caused a new attitude towards the president's security, because Czolgosz had simply queued up to shake McKinley's hand, concealing a pistol under a handkerchief.

1914 — Battle of the Marne began.

1940 — King Carol of Romania abdicated in favor of his son, Prince Michael.

1952 — A jet aircraft piloted by John Derry crashed into the crowd at the Farnborough air show.

From The Ottawa Journal

One reason the world seems to have so many problems is that it's easier and more fun to "identify" new ones than to solve old ones.

Headlines saying food prices are going up again are not entirely correct. Some of them are going up still.

Coho lead tied in King Fisherman contest

Harry Askey, of 1966 Fairfield, has tied for the lead in the coho section of the King Fisherman contest.

Askey's 17:8-pound coho ties for the lead with Al Beasley Jr., 1190 Tattersall.

Askey was fishing near Secretary Island in Sooke waters, using a minnow as a lure, when he made the catch.

The fish was confirmed as a coho by a fisheries official.

Both Askey and Beasley are Colonist subscribers and qualify for the Peetz recording reel, Peetz two-piece rod with stainless steel eyes and 600 feet of braided steel line, courtesy of Peetz Tackle and Ski Shop for the Colonist subscriber with the heaviest coho.

Anglers are again reminded that all coho over 17:8-pounds must be identified by a fisheries official.

Mining man says B.C. tax not so tough

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former Quebec mining operator says that British Columbia laws affecting new mining developments are more acceptable than Quebec's or Ontario's.

Charles Robbins, formerly of Montreal, made the observations while describing to the annual shareholder's meeting Thursday plans to get the Dolly Varden Mines Ltd. silver property in northwestern B.C. into profitable production.

Robbins has made Vancouver the operating headquarters for his mining interests in several provinces and the Yukon. Through one of his companies, Royal Agassiz Mines Ltd., he has taken control of Dolly Varden and is negotiating with another company to restore production.

He said he found that financing properties in Quebec was impossible because its Securities and Exchange Commission won't let junior mining companies sell stock to the public.

Ontario also is impossible because it keeps changing the rules, he said.

In B.C., despite the "tightening up", a junior mining company can raise money and the new provincial royalty and tax laws "can be lived with," he said.

Alberta crude assured

The British Columbia government has reached agreement in principle with Alberta for a supply of crude oil for B.C.'s proposed oil refinery, Jim Rhodes, chairman of the B.C. Petroleum Corp., said Friday.

Letters have been exchanged with Alberta confirming a supply of oil, he said, but further negotiations of the specifics of the arrangement are still going on.

The provinces now are discussing the price and grade of oil to be supplied and the amount and length of the oil exchanged are still to be determined, he said.

The B.C. government proposed to build a $350 million refinery but a location has not been decided upon.

Long strike finishes distillery

Seagrams drops B.C. production

VANCOUVER (CP) — The strikebound B.C. Distillery Co., will close its operation in British Columbia, Mel Griffin, executive vice-president of the House of Seagram, said Friday.

Griffin said the B.C. Distillery Co. is closing its production plant in nearby New Westminster and warehouse operations in Vancouver because efforts to get striking members of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union, Local 604, to return to the bargaining table failed. He said about 140 workers would be affected.

He said in a news release poor production levels at the New Westminster plant in a time of rapidly rising costs made the B.C. operation noncompetitive.

The New Westminster and Marpole plants have been strikebound since early in June. The B.C. Federation of Labor has a province-wide "hot edict" on all Seagram brands.

Griffin said the union has declined to discuss a new contract until the company first accepts a union demand for a guaranteed level of employment and production.

"We are just not prepared to make that kind of commitment which, in our view, is a decision under management responsibility."

Keith Sheedy, union spokesman, denied the union refused to return to the bargaining table.

He said the union sent a telegram to the company Aug. 28 requesting a meeting. He said the union received a company telegram Sept. 2 stating it had to accept the company's proposal for settlement or there would be no significance to the meeting.

He said the union would continue to picket Seagram operations and would also organize an international boycott of Seagram products through the Canadian Labor Congress and the B.C. Federation of Labor.

Home insurance to rise

TORONTO (CP) — Premiums for home owner insurance are likely to rise early next year, E. F. Belton, president of the Insurers Advisory Organization of Canada (IAC), said Friday. Belton was commenting in an interview on published reports Thursday that quoted him as saying premiums would increase substantially.

"We have no idea how high any increase may be, since we have only just started to feed statistics into the computer," he said. "However, there's no doubt about it that the review of these statistics will result in some kind of increase."

Belton also said that there may be a reduction of premiums "in some cases."

Hovercraft stretch for traffic

By JIM BRAHAN
Colonist Marine Reporter

Hovercraft traffic between England and France is big business and demands of the passenger service has caused British Rail to seek ways to expand the cross Channel hovercraft operations.

The company wants to develop high speed inter-city rail and hovercraft links to European capitals, and to stretch its existing hovercraft (SRN 4s) to almost double their present size.

To develop the project the company must get the blessing of the British government's environment department.

If it gets the department's nod the two hovercraft will be cut in half, leaving the complicated bow and stern installations, engines and machinery intact. A 56-foot long section will then be inserted in the middle.

The stretching of the hovercraft will increase passenger capacity from 254 to 400 and car capacity from 31 to 59.

By beefing up the hovercraft service British Rail hopes to alleviate long waiting periods (up to three days) on its regular channel ferries.

The vanguard of a flotilla bearing high priority equipment for the trans-Alaska pipe line was nearing its Prudhoe Bay destination Friday after sparring with Arctic ice for nearly six weeks.

The first four tugs of the Seattle-Prudhoe sealift are towing into Prudhoe Bay the first five bargeloads of cargo to reach the North Slope oil fields this year.

Five other tugs and barge units that left Point Barrow Tuesday when the Arctic ice wall shifted offshore sufficiently to clear a sailing path, still are laboring through the ice to their destination.

The rest of the 23 - tug, 47-barge sea-train behind is stalled by ice at the Alaskan points of Wainwright and Port Clarence.

The 41,000-ton American container ship Sea-land Finance will go into the federal government drydock at Esquimalt early Monday for its annual docking and general refit. The ship will be in the graving dock until Sept. 30.

The cruise ship Monterey will put in at Ogden Point Tuesday for her last appearance here this year. She is on her return trip to San Francisco after cruising in Alaskan waters. The ship is scheduled to arrive at 9 a.m. and depart at 6 p.m.

Princess Cruise's 20,000-ton cruise liner Pacific Princess is scheduled to refit at Yarrows Ltd., at Esquimalt from Nov. 12-20. A Yarrows' official said Friday a dollar value for the annual docking and refurbishing of the ship has not been set.

Canadian Transport Ltd., the ship chartering arm of Vancouver-based MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., is projected to have a loss of $34.3 million for 1975 in a study by investment broker Burns Bros. and Denton Ltd. of Toronto.

Canadian Transport, which bought long and medium term charters at high 1973 and 1974 values, has been caught by slumps in both the forest products and ocean freight markets.

Genstar Ltd. announced this week the appointment of James Stewart as board chairman and John Eyre as president and chief executive officer of Genstar Marine Ltd., in a move to group the company's diverse marine activities under a single entity.

The unit includes Seaspan International Ltd., Vancouver Shipyards Co. Ltd., McAllister Towing and Salvage Ltd. of Montreal, Quebec, and Seaspan Overseas Limited of Hamilton, Bermuda. Genstar Marine Ltd. is headquartered in Vancouver.

MacMillan Bloedel may lose money

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., faced with labor problems, smaller export markets than expected, and losses in its transportation section, has ordered departments to cut their budgets by 10 per cent, company chairman George Currie said Thursday.

He said in an interview that the company, Canada's largest forest firm, is intensifying efforts to effect "the closest kind of cost control," adding that the company expects a loss in the third quarter.

Profits were $81.7 million in 1973 and $72.2 million in 1974, but only $19.8 million in the first half of 1975, and dividend payments for the third quarter were eliminated.

In a letter to shareholders, Currie said the company may lose money this year for the first time in its history.

PROVINCIAL COURT

A 34-year-old Victoria man who has been in custody since Aug. 1 owing to inability to raise $350 bail was given reduced bail Friday in Victoria Provincial Court despite his having acted, in the words of Judge William Ostler, "like a spoiled child."

Robert Daniel Adams, 989 Balmoral, was due for a routine remand to Tuesday for trial on a charge of possession of marijuana July 31 in Victoria. But his court appearance was delayed because he refused to leave Wilkinson Road jail until he spoke to a newspaperman.

That was shortly after 9 a.m., when several prisoners were to be taken to court in a vehicle with deputy sheriffs as escorts. The others left without Adams while jail officials tried to get in touch with the reporter, who was already on his way to court.

Once the jail officials notified the reporter's paper, Adams agreed to go to court. But when he got there, he sat on the floor and refused to enter the prisoners' box.

"I have a few beefs," he began, but Ostler cut him short and asked defence lawyer William McElmoyle to conduct the proceedings. McElmoyle said Adams could not raise bail and was having difficulties in jail because he is one-legged, presumably meaning medical difficulties.

Prosecutor Michael O'Connor said the crown would not object to reduced bail and Ostler allowed Adams free until Tuesday on his own recognizance in the sum of $500.

He told Adams the change was not "because of your outrageous and disgusting display (which is) an affront and a contempt to the court ... simply because you want to act like a spoiled child."

After court, Adams said he no longer wished to see the reporter.

□

Thomas Richard Boudreau, 19, CFB Esquimalt, got a break from Ostler because of a dime.

Boudreau pleaded guilty to a three-count charge containing one count of mischief and two of wilful damage. Prosecutor Nicholas Land said Boudreau threw rocks Thursday evening through apartment windows at 810, 707 and 527 Esquimalt. The first was worth 50.10 and the others $30 each.

Wilful damage involves amounts up to and including $50 and the mere serious charge of mischief starts from there. Ostler said he would suggest to Boudreau that the plea to the mischief count be not guilty, forcing the crown to prove the $50.10 value.

"It's just absurd," he said, to lay the more serious charge for 10 cents. Lang agreed and Ostler found Boudreau guilty of wilful damage to the $50.10 window.

Boudreau, who admitted he had been drunk, must pay a total of $215 — $35 for each count of wilful damage and $30, $30 and $50, not $50.10, to repair the windows.

□

Peter Michael Downey, 21, of Mississauga, Ont., was sentenced by Ostler to three months in jail and the judge said he would recommend the time be spent at a forestry camp.

Downey pleaded guilty Tuesday to a Victoria charge containing two counts each of forgery and uttering. He was staying at a Victoria home while visiting in this area when he took two cheques and cashed them for a total of $300.

Ostler called it "a particularly mean offence."

□

"Incredible gall" and "the grossest impertinence" were phrases used by Ostler to describe the conduct of Montreal resident Serge Laurent Gascon, 25, who pleaded guilty to a two-count charge of obtaining $325 in food, drinks and lodgings at The Empress by fraud.

Lang said Gascon ran up the bill between Aug. 29 and Friday, $100.15 of it for liquor. Legal Aid duty counsel William McCallum said Gascon came here in search of work and was awaiting welfare payments.

"One really wonders at the incredible gall," said Ostler. "It's the grossest impertinence. And now he wants to go on welfare."

Gascon received a suspended sentence and was put on probation for six months and ordered to pay $325 to The Empress within four months.

□

In the court section of Judge F. S. Green, a total jail sentence of 54 days followed by a one-year term of probation was set for Patrick James Stienson, 30, who pleaded guilty Aug. 29 to two Saanich charges.

They resulted from assaults Aug. 25 on three Wilkinson Road jail officers after Stienson received some bad news which was never explained in court. He later apologized to the officers.

He entered the jail June 6 to serve time for car theft and driving while under a licence suspension and had been due for release last Wednesday.

□

In the court section of Judge Douglas Campbell, Union Bay resident Donald Wesley Krook, 20, pleaded guilty to two Saanich charges of impaired driving and possession of a known stolen car March 8 and a Victoria charge of failing to report to a probation officer.

He was first charged June 23 and ordered to report at least once a month before his next hearing Friday, but did not do so after June.

Campbell sentenced Krook to 30 days in jail for failure to report, a one-year probation term for possession and a $350 fine for impaired driving.,

New bridge schedule will ease traffic

Rush-hour traffic snarl-ups around Johnston Street Bridge will end Sept. 30.

A new schedule approved by Victoria city council and effective Oct. 1 will end the raising of the bridge between 7 and 9 a.m. and 4 and 6 p.m.

An operator will be on duty from 9 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, and from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekends and holidays.

The present schedule calls for operators to be on duty at the bridge 24 hours a day.

Shipping firms who want the bridge raised during off-hours must pay for an operator and give the city 24 hours notice.

Minister will join Baptists on Sunday

Central Baptist Church will welcome Rev. Alex Shook and his wife to their congregation Sunday.

Shook will be associate pastor, working mainly in outreach and discipling ministries of the church.

Former pastor of churches in Toronto and Ottawa, he completed more than 10 years of ministry in Greenfield Park Church, Montreal, before moving to Victoria. He has authored the "share" discipling program being used extensively by churches associated with the Fellowship of Evangelical Baptist Churches in Canada.

Central Baptist Church, with a membership of more than 600 persons, has on its staff Rev. Robert Holmes as pastor, Cecil Eno, associate in administration, and Verne Scott, associate in Christian education.

An induction service with reception later will be conducted Sunday at 7 p.m. at the church, 833 Pandora.

Two lumber firms closed

COURTENAY — Field Sawmills here and Raven Lumber Ltd. in Campbell River have closed down their operations indefinitely because of poor market conditions.

Pat Martin, president of Raven, said the sawmill was shut down because the firm cannot sell finished lumber or pulp materials.

About 100 men are out of work at the Campbell River plant due to the closure.

Field Sawmills shut down its mill because of depressed or non-existent lumber and pulp material markets.

The local sales office at Raven will remain open for the time being to serve customers from existing lumber stocks.

The only sawmill remaining open in the Campbell River area is Pallan Timber Products Ltd., which employs 12 men milling specialty products, such as door sashes.

LONG BEACH — Pacific Rim National Park has a new superintendent.

The appointment of Frank Camp was announced by William Turnbull, Calgary-based director of Parks Canada's western region. Camp is returning after an absence of three years; he served as operations manager in Pacific Rim from 1970 to 1972.

Camp replaces J. C. Holroyd who left the park earlier this year to become chief of the interpretation and extension service in western regional office at Calgary.

Camp, 48, joined Parks Canada service in 1946 as a warden in Jasper National Park. His other appointments have included: chief park warden, Waterton Lakes National Park, 1957; visitor services supervisor, Banff National Park, 1965; regional visitor services supervisor, western regional office, 1968; operations manager, Pacific Rim, 1970; park superintendent, Point Pelee National Park, 1972, and park superintendent, Pukaskwa National Park, 1974.

Born in Mayerthorpe, Alberta, Camp moved to Jasper National Park in 1931. He joined the Royal Canadian Navy Voluntary Reserves and during the Second World War, served as a torpedoeman in the North Atlantic. His hobbies include hiking, swimming, boating, skiing and photography. He's married and a father of seven children, ranging in age from 15 to 22.

NANAIMO — Continuing education instructors from Nanaimo, Parksville and Qualicum step into a new role today when Malaspina College plays host to a seminar and workshop.

Organized by the college's continuing education director John Buckingham, the one-day seminar at the Tally Ho motel will see the instructors stepping into their pupils' shoes for a series of talks and warkshops.

The guest speakers will be Dr. Jim Thornton, chairman of the adult education research department at University of British Columbia, and Kerry Elfstrom, an expert on audio-visual equipment and techniques from Geoid Media Systems, Vancouver.

The seminar, which will also be attended by Ron Hanson, the education department's co-ordinator of continuing education, will provide the instructors with a fresh insight into adult learning problems, the principles of learning, course planning techniques and the communication arts.

The morning session will be opened by Thornton, who will speak on the Adult as a Learner, and Principles of Learning. The subsequent workshop will allow Elfstrom to demonstsate instructional equipment and to talk on Improving Your Classroom Technique.

COURTENAY — Local supporters of Progressive Conservative candidate Victor Stephens celebrated what they termed the "end of the beginning" this week.

Stephens, a Courtenay lawyer, held a social evening to review his door-to-door campaign aimed at winning the provincial Comox riding seat for the Conservatives.

In his campaign, which started the day after his nomination in February, Stephens has criss-crossed the riding several times meeting people.

He told the gathering, "We are going to win this seat because we represent those people who don't like to be classed as 'little people, or the common Joe'."

His campaigning has shown "our riding still has the values and virtues of the pioneering spirit and the individuals who gave us that spirit," he said.

CUMBERLAND — Failure of Vancouver Island Coach Lines to provide bus service to Cumberland has been attacked by Mayor William Moncrief.

On his insistence that council "demand this service for our citizens," council unanimously endorsed a motion asking the company to start a service.

Moncrief said that until recently the company provided a taxi for village residents arriving in Courtenay late at night.

Since this practice was discontinued, the village has been left without any form of public transportation.

Moncrief said the company promised to send a representative to a council meeting to discuss the situation, "but I guess they've forgotten about us."

COMOX — Improvements to parks in the municipality are planned if the town of Comox receives a $17,000 grant under the Local Initiatives Program.

The work will take place at Marina, Port Augusta, Anderton parks and a nature park at Noel Avenue and Linshart Road.

At the new marina park an area will be levelled ready for seeding, a bandstand and and flower beds and a rock garden completed.

Cleaning out the creek bed and shoring up the cumbling bank are planned at Port Augusta park while volleyball and basketball posts and a tennis backstop will be installed in Anderton Park.

The nature park project involved clearing the area of dead trees and logs and constructing pathways.

CAMPBELL RIVER — Gas attendant Michael Johnson was robbed at knifepoint of $200 at the Haida Brake and Muffler on the Island Highway.

Johnson said the man fled the scene in a 1968 Chevrolet panel truck after the incident.

Campbell River RCMP are investigating.

Breath counts fail court test

COURTENAY — Judge Jack Caldwell has dismissed charges of failing to take a breath test laid by police against two area men.

John Richard Teter of Black Creek was fined $250 for impaired driving but cleared of failing to take a breath test. He told police, according to testimony of RCMP Constable Richard Pemberton, that he wanted a blood test and continued to refuse to take the breath test even after the section of the Criminal Code pertaining to this charge was read to him.

Teter, whose brother "had been involved with police on an earlier occasion," said he felt a blood test would give a more accurate reading.

Defence counsel Harry Redding maintained his client had a reasonable excuse for refusing the test.

He posed a hypothetical case of a dishonest police officer who changed the breath test reading for his own purposes and said unless a doctor poured alcohol into a blood sample, "it had to be correct when analysed."

Redding said "it's fundamentally wrong for an accused to be at the mercy of a police officer. If he wants to get you he'll get you." He said his client was afraid he would be framed and added, "A policeman can do anything with you with that machine."

Crown counsel Terry Laliberte argued there was no evidence to indicate a blood test was better than a breath test and suggested in a hypothetical situation a doctor could be dishonest with a blood sample as easily as a police officer could be with the reading of a breath sample.

Caldwell said he believed Teter's offer to take a blood test was made sincerely.

He said the evidence of Pemberton was "less than satisfactory" and "selective."

Team coaches quit over race incident

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Federal civil rights and local government officials said Friday they will investigate to determine if racism was involved in the dropping of an eight-year-old black youth from an Elks-sponsored football team.

Thomas R. Hunt, an Annapolis resident who is executive officer of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, said he would ask the Justice Department to look into the situation involving Tony Bryant to determine whether the Civil Rights Act had been violated.

Bryant, a third-grader whose coaches said he had the ability and desire to play for the 65-pound-and-under team, was ordered dropped by the sponsor, Elks Lodge 622 of Annapolis, because of his race, says his mother, Mrs. Glenna Bryant.

Mrs. Bryant said the action came after a meeting of Elks leaders Tuesday night. Her allegation has been supported by the team's three coaches who quit in protest of the child's dismissal.

James McNamara, the exalted ruler of the Elks Lodge, has not been available for comment to The Associated Press. He told a Washington radio station the youth was dropped with two white boys because they weren't good enough to make the team. He said the Elks would issue a statement later.

Classroom juggling act put to parents

MONTREAL (CP) — The Jerome Le Royer School Commission has completed a juggling act to determine the assigning of an additional 221 places in its English-language schools but many parents may remain unsatisfied.

Commission spokesmen said principals of its 11 English-language schools in east-end St. Leonard spent Friday making up new class lists following several days of confusion over admission to the schools which culminated in their closing on Thursday.

Commission chairman Raphael Iadeluca said principals could begin informing families today where their children would be assigned and that all families would be notified by Monday, when the schools are to reopen.

The new places became available after commission representatives and officials of the Quebec department of education met earlier in the week.

Originally the commission had placed only 74 children in English schools although 408 of nearly 600 children who applied had passed English proficiency tests.

The tests are required under Quebec's Official Language Act (Bill 22) for children whose mother tongue is not English but who wish to attend English-language schools. Those whod do not pass must attend French-language schools.

Parents who may remain unsatisfied will be those of the 113 remaining children who passed the tests but who Iadeluca said have been assigned to French-language schools.

There is a possibility they might attend English-language schools of other school boards in the area.

The Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal announced late Thursday it has directed its principals to accept applications from students who passed the English tests at Le Royer.

Chairman John Simms said the board's lawyers saw no conflict with Bill 22 in accepting the students.

Aspirin effects studied

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal health officials said Friday they are studying the possibility that aspirin may cause complications during pregnancy, but for the present are not considering putting a warning on aspirin labels.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration said Thursday it was considering recommending a warning against the unprescribed use of aspirin during pregnancy be placed on every aspirin bottle label.

U.S. concern about aspirin was caused by a study by two Australian doctors which was reported in the British medical journal Lancet.

The doctors found women who took aspirin regularly during pregnancy suffered a high rate of complications such as bleeding or infection.

The study also showed the aspirin users' pregnancies lasted a week longer and their labor almost an hour longer than average.

Quebec's Wagner lauds Stanfield commitments

HALIFAX (CP) — Claude Wagner, Robert Stanfield's Quebec lieutenant in the Progressive Conservative party, came out strongly Friday for the party leader and his principles.

"The entire party would do well to keep in mind what I call the Nova Scotia commitment," he said in a speech prepared for the annual meeting of the party's Halifax-East Hants association.

He defined his commitment as the "fair play and progress that is the critical element of Robert Stanfield's continuing contribution to public life."

Wagner, one of three Quebec MPs in the party, said the party should keep this in mind during the five months before the convention to choose a successor to Stanfield next February in Ottawa.

"The temptation to forget that commitment will be great. From within our party and without, many will be saying to us: Move to the right, toughen up on Quebec, forget Quebec, seek victory the cheap way."

Wagner, a former Quebec justice minister first elected to Parliament in 1972, said that if the party shied away from its commitment to "fair play and progress," it might be damaging when the next election is decided.

He said it would be admitting the party is limited in its scope, something Liberal strategists woud like to see.

"They hope for a bitter leadership campaign . . . that destroys all the civility and decency that Bob Stanfield brought to our party, a campaign that destroys all that he stood for, a campaign that has no role in it for anyone except the elite or the wealthy or those who have been in power for some time."

A potential leadership candidate himself, although he has made no firm statements to this effect, Wagner said there are some Conservatives who would like to see a bitter leadership contest.

"I am here to ask that we be strong . . . against those who would divide us."

Arctic ice closes on barges

SEATTLE (AP) — Arctic ice closed its hand Friday around five tugs with barges drifting with giant bergs toward Prudhoe Bay, jumping off point for Alaska's giant oil fields.

The wind carrying the boats eastward with their icy escorts could mean disaster if it turns toward shore, compacting the floes the vessels are trying to stay between.

If conditions hold, the five tugs should join by today or Sunday, four tugs and five barges that dropped anchor at Prudhoe late Thursday.

Although one of the Prudhoe barges was heavily damaged in its forward section by ice, the cargo was unscathed.

A second barge arrived at Prudhoe with a missing skeg.

Some tugs and barges managed to slip through a break in the floes earlier this week, but 14 larger tugs and 37 barges are still waiting for clear passage off Wainwright, Alaska.

Cougar manager-coach Pat Ginnell, left, welcomes Jeff McDill and Larry McNabb

McDill joins Cougars; McNabb Clipper coach

By STAN COOPER

Victoria Cougars made it official Friday.

Rightwinger Jeff McDill has been obtained in a Western Canada Hockey League trade with Flin Flon Bombers.

And Cougar manager-coach Pat Ginnell had some other information for a media gathering at the Imperial Inn.

● Larry McNabb, a veteran of 15 professional seasons in the Western and American Hockey Leagues, has been appointed coach of Nanaimo Clippers, the Cougar affiliate in the B.C. Junior Hockey League.

● Gordon Hahn, 28, will join the Cougars as trainer this weekend in preparation for the training camp which starts Monday at Juan de Fuca Arena;

● Season-ticket sales have passed the 1100-mark (up 400 from last year), and the popular draw for a new automobile will be repeated this season — and with a difference. The Royal Bank of Canada, which purchased 95 season tickets and won the car (and subsequently donated it to minor hockey leagues in Victoria) will not be entered in the draw this season;

● Richard Dutka of Nanaimo has been retained as coach of Nanaimo Buckaneers, the Clipper farm team in the North Island Jr. "B" Hockey League.

Now the details:

The trade for the five-feet 11, 185-pound McDill has been in the negotiation stage for some time and is not yet complete.

Cougars have sent 19-year-old defenceman Gord Genereux, a product of the Saskatoon minor program who played two seasons in Nanaimo, to the Bombers, and another player will be sent before the WCHL season opens next month. The player will not be a holdover from last season's club.

Cougars have also paid an undisclosed amount of cash and a portion of any future draft money obtained for McDill from professional clubs.

Ginnell, manager-coach in Flin Flon before coming to Victoria in December, 1973, recruited McDill in Dauphin, Man., and the husky winger played two seasons with the Bombers.

He scored 24 goals and drew 44 assists in 46 games last season, missing 24 games after suffering torn ligaments and cartilage in his right knee. An operation has corrected the injury.

McDill is enrolled in a mathematics course at University of Victoria.

"I'm counting on Jeff for 50 goals this season," Ginnell said, indicating the 19-year-old would be playing on a line with centre Jim Gustafson, a 102-point scorer last season here and returning to the Cats as an over-age player this campaign.

McNabb, 35, coached the Clippers briefly last season, taking the tail-enders to the Coastal Division playoff final before losing out to Bellingham Blazers.

McNabb, who owns a sporting good store in Nanaimo, will be assisting Ginnell at training camp and will have less than three weeks to get his team ready for the league opener, Sept. 28 in Penticton.

Clippers, who move into the new Nanaimo arena sometime in November, play their home opener Oct. 3 against Penticton at the Civic Arena.

McNabb, who held part ownership of the Clippers before selling out to Ginnell, was one of three candidates for the position, and Ginnell feels the former defenceman, who wrapped up his playing career in 1974 with Portland Buckaroos of the Western Hockey League, has the right approach to handling young players.

"Larry will take no nonsense," Ginnell said, "and he'll be respected."

McNabb said he will rely heavily on former—Nanaimo coach Jim Dawes in selecting players. Dawes is the Cougar and Clipper scout for the north Island.

"We'll have a tougher team," McNabb said, "but we won't be violent. Fans in Nanaimo are turned off by constant brawling but they appreciate a hardworking team and a winner."

About 80 players including about 12 holdovers from last season's Cougar club, will start workouts Monday, and Ginnell hopes to be down to 50 in five days.

Cougars will play exhibition games against the Chiefs in Kamloops, Sept. 13-14, and will play host to the interior club the following weekend at Memorial Arena. Then its a four-games-in-four-nights swing with rival New Westminster Bruins, starting Sept. 25 in Campbell River. The series continues Sept. 26 in Nanaimo, Sept. 27 at Memorial Arena and the following night in New Westminster.

Cougars open their season Oct. 4 against the visiting Calgary Centennials and leave on a nine-game road trip, starting Oct. 8 in Calgary.

In Hahn, Ginnell has an established junior hockey trainer. The Saskatchewan native has been trainer with Brandon Wheat Kings of the WCHL for two seasons and worked previously with midget and juvenile clubs in the Melville, Sask. area for about five years.

Kingman contributes clout to Seaver's 21st victory

New York Mets decided they needed more slugging power so they purchased Dave Kingman from San Francisco Giants.

So far the six-foot-six, 210-pounder has lived up to expectations.

On Friday, he hit his 30th home run and Tom Seaver won his 21st game as New York Mets defeated St. Louis Cardinals, 5-2, in a National League baseball game at New York.

Kingman, whose best season with the Giants was 1972 when he hit 29 homers, was purchased from San Francisco at the end of last season for $125,000.

The Mets hit only 85 homers in 1974, second lowest in the majors, and Rusty Staub led the team with 19.

After his fine sophomore season in 1972, Kingman, who plays first-base, third base and the outfield, dropped to 24 home runs in 1973, and 18 home runs in 1974 and last season, led the National League first basemen with 25 errors.

Seaver, 21-7, working with only three days rest instead of his customary four, was removed for a pinch hitter in the sixth inning. The two runs he allowed were the first he'd given up in 22 innings.

The victory moved the Mets into a tie for third place with the Cardinals, five and a half games behind first-place Pittsburgh Pirates, who split a doubleheader with Montreal Expos.

Montreal won the opener, 4-3, but the Pirates came back to take the nightcap, 5-2.

Philadelphia Phillies remained five games behind the Pirates by splitting their doubleheader with Chicago Cubs.

In the National League West, Pete Rose celebrated playing in his 2,000 major-league game by hitting a two-run home run and helping Cincinnati Reds to a 4-3 win over San Francisco.

Rose, who has played 13 seasons for the Reds and has a lifetime batting average of .310, is the 87th player to play in 2000 or more games.

The Reds' victory was their 58th at Riverfront Stadium, setting a club record for home triumphs. They need four more victories at home to break the National League record set by San Francisco in 1962.

B.C. opens with win

BURNABY (CP) — The host British Columbia team was the only province to score a victory Friday during the first round of the Western Canada under-18 select soccer championship.

Three-goal performances by Tony Munoz and Richard Beerenn sparked B.C. to a 9-0 romp over Saskatchewan.

Alberta and Manitoba played to a 2-2 tie.

Ali to fight in Germany?

NEW YORK (AP) — Negotiations are under way for a title defence by Muhammad Ali against an unnamed opponent in Germany early next year if Ali beats Joe Frazier in Manila on Oct. 1, promoter Don King said Friday.

The West German newspaper Bild Zeitung quoted Ali's manager, Herbert Muhammad, as saying Ali would fight George Foreman in Munich on Feb. 6. It also said an Arab group based in Zurich is reported to be backing the fight but must deposit $700,000 in a Chicago bank by Sept. 10.

Meeker blasts Shero

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP) — Howie Meeker says "Fred Shero is the greatest con artist in the business."

Meeker, former National Hockey League star turned television analyst, was replying to a question about the Philadelphia Flyers coach's "Russian System."

Speaking at Trinity College School, where he announced opening of a hockey school next year, Meeker said the Flyers are the team least capable of playing the Soviet Union style in the entire National Hockey League.

"If they play like the Russians, I play like the Hawaiians," Meeker said. "Shero hasn't even studied the Russian system, and I've told him so to his face.

"Don't get me wrong," Meeker added. "Shero is a great coach. But what he does is get a bunch of millionaires to play like orphans — he makes them hungry.

When asked about violence in minor hockey, and the McMurtry report, Meeker said the report was "a lot of nonsense." The report was commissioned by the Ontario government in 1974 to study violence in minor hockey.

He said there is nothing wrong with grown men having a good fight after sticks and gloves are dropped. But what does cause violence in minor hockey are parents.

"When an official gives their kid a penalty, they yell and scream till all the good officials get fed up with crap and leave the game.

Stabler leads Raider romp

DALLAS (AP) — Oakland's poised Ken Stabler blitzed Dallas with two touchdown passes in a three-minute span of the second quarter and the unbeaten Raiders smothered the awe-struck Dallas Cowboys 31-20 in the only National Football League exhibition game Friday night.

Stabler, who has yet to be intercepted in Oakland's 5-0 exhibition season, completed six of eight passes for 71 yards before calling it an evening at halftime.

Olympic tickets on sale

MONTREAL (CP) — About 1.5 million tickets for the 1976 Olympic Games will be available for sale Sept. 15 at 22 T. Eaton Co. Ltd. outlets across Canada, an Olympic organizing committee official said Friday.

An organizing committee report showed that only about one-quarter of the two million available tickets were sold at Eaton outlets in the first cross-Canada distribution program between May 15 and June 30.

Ken Farmer, director of spectator services, told a press conference that the largest quantity of tickets still available are for admission to such sports as track and field, soccer and field hockey.

France to seek America's Cup

NEW YORK (Reuter). — Baron Marcel Bich of France, who twice previously sponsored unsuccessful challengers for the America's Cup, has been accepted as a challenger for the 1977 edition of the 12-metre yachting series, the New York Yacht Club announced Friday.

The United States has never lost since the first race in the series was won by the yacht America in 1851. The last defence was in 1974, when the American yacht Courageous beat the Australian yacht Southern Cross 4-0 in a best-of-seven series.

Bich's 1977 challenge was issued in the name of the D'Hyeres Yacht Club.

The New York Yacht Club said that under the terms of its acceptance, the D'Hyeres Yacht Club agrees to conduct a series of elimination races among its representative and other challengers from Britain, Australia and Sweden.

The winner of the eliminations will race against the American defender. The U.S. has defended the cup 22 times since the 1851 inaugural race.

Schultz signs hefty pact

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dave Schultz, who holds National Hockey League record for most penalty minutes in one season, says he has signed a multi-year contract with Philadelphia Flyers, the Stanley Cup champions the last two years.

Schultz said this week he has signed a contract with the Flyers through the 1980 season.

Terms were not disclosed, but the Philadelphia Inquirer estimated the pact was worth at least $350,000.

Last season, Schultz had nine goals and 17 assists for 26 points along with a record 472 minutes in penalties during regular-season play.

Miller, Graham picked

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Johnny Miller, professional golf's leading money winner in 1974, and 1975 U.S. Open champion Lou Graham will represent the United States in the 23rd annual World Cup, it was announced Friday.

Fifty nations will compete for the championship which will be contested in Bangkok Dec. 3-7 on the Navatanee Golf Course.

A rule of the Tournament Players Division of the Professional Golf Association provides that the current PGA and U.S. Open champions will represent the United States.

However, Jack Nicklaus, winner of the 1975 PGA and seven times a member of U.S. World Cup teams, declined due to previous commitments.

Carol two strokes up

DALLAS (AP) — Carol Mann used a red-hot putter to fashion a five-under-par 67 and grab a two-shot lead Friday in the first round of the $46,000 Dallas Civitan Women's Open.

Miss Mann, winner of three tournaments on the 1975 Ladies' PGA tour, used only 28 putts and hit 15 greens to wrest the lead from three earlier finishers who posted three-under par 69s under ideal weather conditions.

With titles at Medinah, Columbus and Philadelphia under her belt, Miss Mann is fifth on the LPGA money list with $44,985.

Grouped in a tie for second are Joyce Kazmierski, Betsy Cullen and Sandra Spuzich.

Seven players are bunched at 70 and 11 at 71.

Pat captains Flames

ATLANTA (AP) — Veteran defenceman Pat Quinn was named Friday captain of Atlanta Flames.

"When you look for a team captain, you naturally look for a player who has demonstrated leadership qualities," said general manager Cliff Fletcher in making the announcement.

"In his three years with the Flames, Pat Quinn has done that. He has also earned the respect of his teammates. This makes him an ideal choice."

Veteran kicker released

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — Place-kicker Bruce Gossett, seventh highest scorer in National Football League history, was released Friday by San Francisco '49ers after clearing waivers.

The departure of the 33-year-old veteran apparently left the team's place-kicking job to rookie Steve Mike-Mayer from Maryland.

Gossett was placed on waivers earlier in the week, but it was not announced by the '49ers. No other NFL team claimed him, the 49ers said, so he became free to negotiate with any team.

Gossett has scored 1031 points in his 11-year NFL career which began in 1964 with Los Angeles Rams. He was traded to the '49ers in 1970.

Canuck forward fined

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Dennis Ververgaert, right winger for Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, was fined $200 in provincial court Friday after pleading guilty to a common-assault charge.

Ververgaert, 22, went to a hotel in nearby Grimsby with his brother Peter and several other persons May 5. Charges and countercharges were laid after a fight alleged to have involved Ververgaert and Rick Lamoureux, a member of the band performing at the hotel in Ververgaert's hometown.

Provincial judge T. R. Begora reduced the charge of assault causing bodily harm to a charge of common assault.

Court was told the incident arose after abusive language and insults were passed between the entertainers and the persons at one table in the hotel's beverage room.

Canadian XI wins

EDINBURGH, Scotland (CP) — The Canadian women's field hockey team blanked Zambia 4-0 in the consolation section of the world field hockey championships Friday.

In the main section, Group 1, The Netherlands and the United States tied 0-0 but the Dutch girls won on penalties, while Wales and Belgium tied 0-0 with Wales winning on penalties.

Canada 200 competitors

Don Harper of Ashland, Ore., shows off his 1975 Camaro to top Victoria drivers Roy Haslam (centre) and Larry Pollard. The three super-stock drivers were testing their cars Friday in preparation for the Canada 200 tonight at Western Speedway. The 200 is the premier event of the season at the Speedway and included in the field of entries are NASCAR great Bobby Allison, International Drivers Challenge winner Ron Eaton and 1974 NASCAR Northwest champion Don Dowdy. Gates open at 4 p.m. Time trials start at 6:30.

Burden taking aim at rushing record

Willie Burden is running at a record pace.

The 24-year-old halfback who ran for 2529 yards in three seasons at North Carolina State University and joined Calgary Stampeders midway through last season, leads the Canadian Football League with 908 yards from his first seven games.

He is almost 300 yards ahead of Saskatchewan-veteran George Reed and zeroing in on a record. At his present pace, Burden would become the first CFL player to rush for more than 2000 yards in one season. Barring injury, he seems certain to break the league record of 1794 yards, set by Earl Lunsford of the Stampeders in 1961.

Burden, who rushed for more than 100 yards in each of his last four games last season and now has a five-game 100-yard streak going, has averaged 129.7 yards a game, and can break Lunsford's record with a 98.5-yard average for his remaining nine games.

Latest league statistics, which do not include this week's Ottawa and Montreal and Winnipeg at B.C. games, show Roy Bell of Edmonton Eskimos and Richard Crump of Winnipeg Blue Bombers third and fourth in the Western Conference. But Lou Harris of B.C. Lions, hampered by injuries and with only 48 carries in his first six games leads the Western Conference in average gain. Counting the 142 yards he piled up Thursday night, Harris has averaged 6.4 yards a carry in packing the ball for 425 yards. Harris has also caught 13 passes for 129 yards.

Jim Young of the Lions leads his conference in touchdown catches with five, and is among the leaders with 21 catches for 441 yards.

Tom Campana of Saskatchewan Roughriders is again showing his versatility. He is second in the west in pass-catching with 27 receptions for 491 yards and four touchdowns, leads in touchdowns with six, in punt returns with 216 yards and a 19-6-yard average and is ninth in kick-off returns.

Tom Wilkinson of Edmonton has the best passing percentage.

Chris, Evonne ready for U.S. Open final

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Chris Evert got a good luck kiss from Jimmy Connors and a favorable call from a linespwoman Friday and moved to within a single step of the United States Open tennis championship she has never won.

Prim in a white frock with her blonde hair tied into a bun, the 20-year-old shotmaking sphinx from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., cut down her frustrated friend and doubles partner, Martina Navratilova of Czechoslovakia, 6-4, 6-4.

The match ended on a rancorous note with the 18-year-old Czech girl disputing an important line call that went against her in the eighth game of the second set. When her protest went unheeded, she slammed down her racquet and tossed away the final nine points of the match.

Chris qualified to meet her keenest and toughest rival, Evonne Goolagong of Australia, in today's final with $25,000 the first prize. The talented Miss Goolagong advanced with a 7-5, 6-1 victory over Virginia Wade, the British vicar's daughter, in a match that proved anticlimatic before another sellout crowd at the West Side Tennis Club.

The women's final, providing a contrast of personalities and styles, will share today's centre-court stage with the men's semi-finals in which Chris' on-again, off-again boyfriend, Connors, will compete. Connors, seeded No. 1 in defence of the title he won on grass a year ago, goes against Sweden's wonder boy, 19-year-old Bjorn Borg, seeded No. 5, while a pair of left-handed Latin strongmen, second-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina and Manuel Orantes of Spain, go at it in the other bracket.

The survivors will play Sunday, also for a $25,000 first prize.

Miss Evert and Miss Goolagong, the latter in private life Mrs. Roger Cawley, have met 20 times since they emerged in the early 1970s as the women superstars of the future. Chris has an over-all edge of 11-9, and is ahead this year 3-1, although Evonne has managed to win the blue ribbon tests.

It was Evonne who prevailed in three sets in their first meeting in 1972 in the Wimbledon semi-finals, and it was she who wrecked Miss Evert's dream in the semi-finals here last year after Chris had won the French, Italian and Wimbledon crowns. The score then was 6-0, 6-7, 6-3.

Since then, the West Side surface has been converted to a grainy synthetic material similar to clay and given the game a face lifting. Clay is a game of steadiness and patience in contrast to the serve-and-volley tactics effective on grass.

On clty, Miss Evert is the indomitable warrior, unbeaten in 25 months on the slower surface, winner of 83 matches covering 17 tournaments, The last time she and Evonne met on clay, Chris won 6-1, 6-1.

Miss Goolagong, playing smoothly and unhurried, took a quick 3-1 lead over Miss Wade with a first-game service break, and, although losing her own service in the 10th game, ran out the first set with eight points in a row.

The second set was no contest as Evonne breezed to an easy victory.

Caribous square series

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP)— Quebec Caribous tied their best-of-seven National Lacrosse League semi-final series against Long Island Tomahawks Friday with a 10-8 win before 4095 fans.

Travis Cook was the scoring leader for Quebec with three goals and an assist, while Jimmy Higgs scored twice and assisted on another.

Doug Hayes scored twice for the Tomahawks, and Jan Magee added three assists.

The series now is tied at one game each, after Long Island won the first match 13-9 Wednesday. The teams travel to Quebec City where the third and fourth games will be played, beginning Tuesday night.

In the other playoff series, Montreal Quebecois and Boston Bolts are tied at one game apiece.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden notes

With bulb-planting time just around the corner, I think it is about time we gave some thought to the proper conditioning of the soil in which the bulbs are to be set. You may not have ordered your bulbs yet, and in fact there is no particular hurry to buy and plant them, but the preparation of the beds is something else again. In common with so many other plants, bulbs seem to get off to a better start in soil which was prepared several weeks in advance of planting.

Actually, the preparation of a bulb bed isn't so very different from the techniques used in conditioning the soil for perennials, roses, or even vegetables. You need to incorporate some bulky organic matter for the improvement of the soil texture, so water and air will be admitted readily, and it should be supplied with some plant food of a mild, long-lasting nature.

Many of the garden books will tell you never to use manure in a bulb bed, the theory being that manure harbors rot organisms which attack the bulbs. I went along with this for a good many years, until I took the trouble to think things through, and came to the conclusion that this was a lot of nonsense.

The same books that banned manure for ornamental bulbs demanded the richest possible dressing of the same material for onions, and if an onion isn't a bulb. I'll eat a peck of daffodil bulbs with a dish of crocus corms on the side!

Far from harboring disease, manure-enriched soil will actually manufacture antibodies which attack plant disease organisms. All our miraculous antibiotics such as penicillin and streptomycin are the products of moulds and other fungi, and I understand that with the exception of penicillin, which came from mouldy bread, most of our modern antibiotics were found in soil high in organic content, and particularly in soils heavily fortified with barnyard manure.

Our forefathers slapped a poultice of fresh cow manure on open wounds, and treated stubborn boils with mouldy bread, knowing nothing about penicillin and vitamin B-12 only that they got results. Realizing the disease-fighting nature of manure, I used plenty of the old, mellow, well-rotted stuff in all my bulb planting, and I have never had a smidgin of any rot disease in my bulbs.

While manure is a wonderful soil conditioner, rich in trace elements and in enzymes, hormones and other mysterious glandular products, it isn't overly rich in actual plant nutrients. While bulbs do fairly well on soil enriched with manure alone, they do even better if a little high-phosphate chemical fertilizer is added.

The rule for preparing a bulb bed is to dig it over twice. Mark off the area, then skim off the grass or weeds for your compost heap. Dig the bed over to the full depth of the spade, taking narrow slices of soil and throwing them well forward.

The next operation is a deep raking to remove sticks and stones and to break up soil lumps. For this job, the prong hoe or cultivator is some better than a garden rake, as it will reach down to a depth of three inches. Give the bed a final levelling with the garden rake.

Now spread your manure and fertilizer on the surface, about a bucketful of manure and a cupful of bone meal or 6-8-6 to the square yard, distributed evenly over the bed, and dig it in, this time in the opposite direction and again taking only narrow bites with the spade so as to mix the dressing intimately with the soil.

This second digging will go easily, and will leave the soil loose and mellow so that planting the bulbs with a hand trowel will be an easy and pleasant task, with no strain at all on the wrist.

Jack Smith

The tombstone epitaph seems to be a lost art, like the clerihew, but the students out at West Los Angeles College are trying to revive it, as they did the clerihew a year or two ago.

"While relaxing from your arduous chores of birdwatching and male liberating," writes Ralph Immel, of the WLA staff, "perhaps you could try your hand at writing some epitaphs for our latest contest."

I don't know why the epitaph should have fallen into such a decline. It seems to have reached its peak in 18th century England, when every man got his line or two on a stone in some country churchyard.

A classic of the period was the epitaph John Gay wrote for himself:

"Life is a jest, and all things show it;
I though so once, and now I know it."

Though in a strict sense an epitaph is something inscribed on a stone or headboard, it may also be any line or verse that summarizes a person's life or character. Thus it was said of W. S. Gilbert:

"His foe was folly and his weapon wit."

In 19th century America the epitaph flowered briefly in the dry desert air of the west, where men were not likely to know much about their fellows except the manner of their final exit, usually violent. It was enough to say, "he died with his boots on."

In modern, affluent America, though graveyards are a big industry, so cloaked in mock dignity and sanctity that the human impulse for laughter and honesty is smothered, I wouldn't be surprised to find that our most successful graveyards have a house rule against honest epitaphs, especially if they seem at all ironic or frivolous.

But the epitaph, like its near relative, the epithet, is a useful device for characterizing ourselves and our fellows, briefly and incisively, and even though it has vanished from its proper place, the grave, it flourishes underground, in the parlor.

Every one who gives it a thought must be fascinated by his own epitaph, and the invitation to make one up is irresistible. Back in the 1920s, Vanity Fair asked a number of celebrities to write their own, and the results happily demonstrated our faculty for looking backward upon our own ends with felicity.

The wit, lover and playwright George S. Kaufman, one of the men I always envied most, made it plain that he would go reluctantly. He wrote: "Here Lies George S. Kaufman, over my dead body."

Harry Hirschfield foresaw the possibility of one final, absurd mistake: "Here lies the body of Harry Hirschfield; if not, notify Gisberg and Co., undertaker, at once!"

Michael Arlen foresaw that even in the streets of heaven he would not be likely to change his ways: "Here lies Michael Arlen, as usual."

Naturally, a person would like to be remembered in the best light, but the form of the autobiographical epitaph requires modesty if not humility. Wallace Irwin managed to kill both birds with one headstone: "Here lies Wallace Irwin of genius so bright, he flashed like a sun where there might have been night; poet, philosopher, novelist, sage; O! What adornments he lent to his age! Gifts such as his cannot wither and die, though he has joined the immortals on high, for his works glow like pearls on a 7-foot shelf. (Note by the Sexton: He wrote this himself.)"

Perhaps the two best-known epitaphs of those exuberant times were those of W. C. Fields and Dorothy Parker. To express his distaste for eternity, whch he may have seen as an endless morning without martinis, W. C. Fields wrote: "I would rather be living in Philadelphia." And Miss Parker said simply, "Excuse my dust!"

As the contest at WLA is open to friends of the college as well as faculty and students, Immel has sent me an entry form, on which I am invited to write my own original epitaph.

All right, I've thought it over, and here it is:

"He erred, he sinned, he missed a few tackles;
"But give the man credit, he sighted two grackles."

I don't say it's a winner, but, by George, the Audubon Society won't be able to say I didn't have the last word.

Sydney Harris

When we don't understand something, what we believe about it is compounded of what we wish, what we fear, and what we imagine. Where there is no knowledge, there can be no rational agreement, and hardly intelligent disagreement.

As a prime example, most people know as little about economics as I do, which is little indeed. Yet this doesn't hinder any of us from expressing the most diverse beliefs in the most passionate of tones — and it is scarcely an accident that, in the majority of cases, our beliefs happen to coincide with what we think will help us individually.

Earlier this summer, a study by three senior fellows at the prestigious Brookings Institution took sharp issue with President Ford's proposed domestic budget, insisting that it would deter economic recovery. They also disagreed with his assertion that the federal budget is becoming an unmanageably large factor in the nation's economic life.

Brookings is a respectable, responsible, not to say conservative establishment; its fellows, senior or junior, do not shoot from the hip. Should those of us who are ignorant of economics believe them, or follow those who take the opposite line? On what factual basis can we decide, if economists themselves cannot agree upon the effects of certain policies?

Many people, myself included, are worried that the U.S. budget keeps shooting up year after year. Yet, according to this study, as a proportion of the Gross National Product, the federal budget share moved up only slightly in the decade from 1960 to 1970, and will not be much higher next year.

Perhaps the economists, too, are more like the rest of us than they pretend. Even when they have the facts, the information, the knowledge, they tend to interpret the total grid in terms of their own personal wishes, fears, prejudices, hopes, and goals.

And perhaps, also, we should begin — for honesty's sake — to divorce what we loosely call "economics" from what ought to be called "political economy," as some people in the field have suggested, so that the distinction is a very real and clear one.

"Economics," properly speaking, describes what has happened and is happening; "political economy" prescribes the anticipated social consequences of these changes and movements. And, in prescribing, the economist is probably just as much subject to his political preconceptions as the most ignorant layman.

It would clear the air, at least, if most of us, economists included, frankly admitted that we promote or oppose certain measures because of prior beliefs that have less to do with "national welfare" and such lofty abstractions than with the attainment of goals or retention of goods that are good for us and not necessarily for anyone else.

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — The off-again, on-again marriage of Cher Bono and Gregg Allman has had deeper repercussions than you can imagine in the rock music world.

The Allman Brothers Band, recording a new album down in Macon, Ga., was slowed down some when Gregg married, divorced and reconciled in the middle of the album.

Rolling Stone, bible of rock music, reports that more than once the band assembled to wait Gregg's Los Angeles-Atlanta-Macon flight only to get the word he had cancelled.

To be close to Cher, he laid down some studio tracks in Los Angeles which is a hell of a way for the leader of a band to make an album.

Drummer Jaimee Johanson on Gregg's no-shows: "A love affair can wait. There's a difference between someone who is already built and someone who is building. Gregg's still building. Cher has had gold albums out since I was a kid (she'll love that)."

Marty Milner lives in Fallbrook in San Diego county and when he was a short-haired cop on Adam-12, used to take a short cut to Hollywood through the back of Camp Pendleton, the Marine's big base. He always got waved through.

Now that he's the star of Swiss Family Robinson, his hair is long. No more shortcut — and it's a long drive to 20th Century-Fox every day from down there. There's really a generation gap.

An upstanding friend of mine travelled with The Rolling Stones on their recent tour of the country.

In Baton Rouge, a teeny-bopper approached this man in his 40s and offered her favors in return for an introduction to Mick Jagger. He gave her a severe lecture, saying he believed in such things only if the two people liked each other and had a meaningful relationship.

The teeny-bopper, about five feet tall, said: "Cool it, man. It's only sex."

Somehow, it lost a lot in the translation to a family newspaper but, let's face it, folks, these are some of our children.

Schroeder snares lead

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — John Schroeder, apparently out of his season-long slump, continued his birdie binge Friday, carving out a 66 to take a two-stroke lead after the second round of the $100,000 Southern Open golf tournament with a nine-under-par 131.

Schroeder, son of former tennis star Ted Schroeder, snapped out of a first-round deadlock with Mac McLendon with a blazing finish over the 6,971-yard, par-70 Green Island Country Club course, carding three consecutive birdies to cap his excellent round.

Rookie Alan Tapie was next at 133 after a 66 over the hilly, narrow course.

Tapie, a 26-year-old newcomer from Newport Beach, Calif., who has earned about $17,000 on the tour, carded five birdies and one bogey.

McLendon managed a 69 for 134 along with Hubert Green, who had a 66.

Defending champion Forrest Fezler had a 71 for a 144, just managing to survive the cut for the final 36 holes.

"It was a beautiful round," said the smiling Schroeder, 29.

Schroeder was referring to his five birdies, four of which came on the closing nine and included a near hole-in-one. On the third from last hole, a 226-yard par 3, his tee shot lipped the cup and trickled 14 inches away. He then closed out the round with two more birdies.

Schroeder, who has not earned any money since mid-May, returned to the tour three weeks ago after a six-week layoff. He failed to make the cut in his two previous starts and had to survive a playoff to qualify here.

Both Dan Haldorson of Brandon, and Toronto's George Knudson both missed the 144 cut-off figure. Halldorson shot 80-70—155 while Knudson had 77-72—149.

Connors heads U.S. team

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Connors was named Friday to head the United States Davis Cup tennis team squad for the Venezuelan Oct. 17-19 in Tucson, Ariz.

Tony Trabert, team captain, made the announcement at the U.S. Open tennis championships.

Other members of the squad for the Venezuean series will be Vitas Gerulaitis of New York, Dick Stockton of Dallas, Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., Eric van Dillen of Aptos, Calif., and Brian Gottfried of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Tripp tops receivers

Victoria Dolphins have had a dismal first half season in the Big Four Junior Football League but one promising note has been the effort of Brad Tripp.

The lanky end and punter leads the league in pass receiving with seven receptions for 179 yards and has scored nine of the Dolphins 25 points.

He combined with quarterback Tom Sullivan on an 84-yard pass and run play for his touchdown and caught a pass for a two-point conversion.

Sullivan and Tripp will be needing some more big gainers when the Dolphins play North Shore Cougars at 6 p.m. Sunday at Royal Athletic Park.

It will be the third straight home game for the winless Dolphins, who had last week off. Dolphins are 0-4 this season, but are still in the race for a playoff berth.

Cougars, who defeated Dolphins, 29-7, in the season opener, are in third place with a 2-2 record, while Vancouver Blue Bombers are 1-3, and are scheduled to play second-place Vancouver Meralomas Sunday at Empire Stadium.

The Meralomas, champions the last eight seasons, have been knocked off their familiar first-place perch but still dominated league statistics.

Skeleton mystery narrows

Anyone who remembers a tall, elderly caretaker named Bill who worked at Sanscha Hall in Sidney more than a decade ago may be able to help Colwood and Sidney RCMP in their investigation of the mysterious M.C.

Police said Friday about half a dozen names have been suggested after a Colonist story Wednesday asked for help in identifying a man whose body was found May 1, 1974, on the East Saanich Indian reserve and a photograph showed a casting based on the man's skull.

One phone call came from the Vancouver area, four went to the Colwood detective division from the Victoria area and the other was received by Sidney RCMP.

The latter seems to be the most promising, although the caretaker named Bill was remembered as six feet tall while the police think the mystery man was closer to five feet, six inches tall.

The caretaker disappeared in 1963 or 1964 and RCMP investigators say the mystery man died at least a decade ago, and was about 70 at the time of death.

The caretaker was known to have suffered a stroke. Some reports say he bought a bus ticket to Victoria shortly before he vanished. Next task is to sift through old payroll accounts at Sanscha Hall to find his name and other details — unless someone can supply them by phoning Sidney or Colwood RCMP.

Central Saanich police chief Robert Miles found the skeleton while checking an abandoned car. The man was wearing a suit, shirt, tie with Windsor knot and black ankle boots.

In the area, police found golf rim glasses, a silver pencil with the initials M.C., a pipe with silver band, a pocket knife, a gold pocket watch, an empty leather change purse and a set of British-made false teeth. Foul play is not suspected.

Mist with a kick

Spreading like ground mist, liquid oxygen from tanker truck was released at Beacon Hill Park, Friday after valve broke on truck as it unloaded at Victoria General Hospital. Victoria firemen escorted truck to park to dump its full load of 4,000 gallons — heady stuff for onlookers. Load was valued at $400.

Police blast Pollen, city on eve of labor hearing

A double-barrelled verbal blast was levelled Friday at Mayor Peter Pollen and Victoria city council.

It came in separate statements from the Victoria Police Union and the B.C. Federation of Peace Officers on the eve of a special hearing on the 1975 city police contract dispute.

Both Pollen and council were criticized in a statement by Victoria union president Sgt. Patrick Braiden, who will attend a Labor Relations Board hearing Tuesday and Wednesday in Vancouver on a union claim that a recent agreement with the Victoria police board is binding on the city.

Criticism in the other statement, by Saanich constable and B.C. federation president Phillip Jamieson, was levelled only at council.

Council recently voted unanimously to reject a police board wage offer of 22.3 per cent, which would have ment Victoria-Saanich police parity. Braiden said Pollen and the council thus "totally betrayed the confidence built up between the police board and the members of the union."

Braiden asked why council chose to follow the recommendations of the lone dissenter on the board — the mayor, who is board chairman — without hearing the other board members.

"It was no coincidence that the mayor chose to take the matter before council when all the other members of the board were away," said Braiden.

"Certainly this course of action was all pre-planned by the mayor, otherwise how could he explain his stating that council would reject the proposals one full day before council actually met to discuss the matter.

"He and he alone precipitated this whole action and when one considers that he actually attended the meetings when agreement was reached ... and must have known all along that what was being negotiated would never be honored by him, one wonders what the world is coming to."

Braiden asked why council has allowed the police force to be under strength when citizens provided funds through taxes for 133 men.

"What happens to the money provided through these taxes if not spent on policemen?" he asked. "Why and how can Saanich afford to pay for an additional 15 men this year alone when we are under strength?"

Braiden said the union would ask the B.C. Police Commission to bring the force up to authorized strength. He denied the union had ever said in negotiations that police would withdraw their services and claimed that Pollen had once said the contract would bankrupt the city and another time the city "has the money to pay."

Jamieson said B.C. Federation of Peace Officers members "are appalled at the outrageous stand (of council) in its attempts to quash the legal rights" of the police board and union.

He said council was "feigning protection of the taxpayers" and "playing politics with law enforcement."

His statement said council is "endeavoring to deprive (police) of their rights ... they are playing the same old game, namely, quibbling and bickering over fundamental conditions of employment that have been settled everywhere else. They are trying to make the Victoria city police force the lowest paid in western Canada."

Annual attempts at this, he said, are "pure bad management ... totally demoralizing and have a tragic effect on law enforcement."

Engine trouble affects Swartz Bay sailings

Engine failure on the Queen of Vancouver has forced the cancellation of a number of B.C. Ferry sailings between Tsawwassen and Swartz Bay during the weekend.

The vessel has been running on three engines instead of four and has been behind schedule on runs for some time.

It is expected that three days will be needed for necessary repairs.

The following sailings will be cancelled:
From Tsawwassen to Swartz Bay — Saturday 4 p.m. and 8 p.m.; Sunday 8 a.m. and noon; Monday 4 p.m. and 8 p.m.

From Swartz Bay to Tsawwassen: Saturday 6 p.m. and 9 p.m.; Sunday 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.; Monday 6 p.m. and 9 p.m.

Long wait at UVic

This is week for long waits at University of Victoria where close to 7,000 students are trying to register. Projected registration figures show that about 1,825 new and 5,050 returning students will attend classes which get under way Monday. Last year's record increase in enrolment of 899 may be broken by tonight.

Plea made for cheque

A cheque for 5,000 pounds issued to J. M. Porter, 670 Dallas, by Inland Revenue of London, England, was lost by the owner in downtown Victoria Friday morning and should be returned to the Toronto-Dominion Bank, Johnson and Douglas, Victoria police said late Friday.

A police spokesman said the cheque could not be cashed by anyone other than Porter.

Gas costs vary after hike

Most Victoria gas stations have added the 5.1 cents to the price of a gallon of gasoline but drivers would still do well to watch the prices before they turn into the gas pumps for a fill-up.

Prices range from 75 to 80 cents for regular gasoline and from 79 to 85 cents a gallon for premium, a Colonist survey showed Friday.

And the bargains are not all at the self-serve stations, some of which sell gas at the going rate or higher, without offering the service given at the manned pumps.

Victoria West Texaco, for instance, is a self-serve outlet.

Gasoline prices there are 75 and 80 cents a gallon, while Burnside Esso, which has manner pumps, charges 74.9 and 78.9 cents.

Other stations checked included Mayfair Chevron, which featured prices of 80 and 85 cents a gallon, Bay 66 at 75.5 and 82.5 cents a gallon.

Two of the "economy stations" were also checked — Econo No. 10 Drive-in, selling gas at 75 and 82 cents a gallon, and Mohawk where gasoline retails at 75 and 80 cents a gallon.

'ESP' focuses signs for fines

Judge William Ostler of Victoria Provincial Court must have ESP.

Two young men pleaded guilty Friday to a joint charge of mischief early Aug. 14 in removing a number of street signs from their positions in Oak Bay and Ostler wondered what kind of signs were involved.

He asked prosecutor Nicholas Lang if they were traffic signs, removal of which could have caused accidents, or were they street names and such quaint signs as "Ducks Crossing."

Lang didn't know but said he had been assured that "none of the signs taken would have caused an accident by their removal." The prosecutor completed the facts of the case and defence lawyer James McLelland then provided evidence of Ostler's ESP.

It was a bit unusual, he said, but the fact was one of the signs said "Ducks Crossing." A surprised Ostler broke in to say, "I thought they were only in Saanich."

McLelland said his clients, Timothy Keavin Bolger, 18, and Neil Michael Heringer, 19, both of the Victoria area, had been "out drinking quite heavily and decided as a prank to take funny signs."

The idea of the game, he said, was to see if they could return the signs to their proper places the next time they were drunk. Since their arrest, however, the signs had all been returned to Oak Bay and put back in place, only slightly damaged.

"I can't take such a lighthearted view of the offence," said Ostler.

He thought the plan to return the signs was "significant and ominous ... it's a very poor attitude to anticipate being drunk. Unless that attitude changes, they'll be in trouble ..."

Bolger and Heringer were fined $50 each, put on probation for six months and instructed to pay Oak Bay $35 each for the damage to "Ducks Crossing" and the other signs.

Pulp pickets may delay mill start

By JIM GIBSON
Colonist Reporter

Sooke Forest Products Ltd.'s 225 International Woodworkers of America employees will be back on the job Monday after a three-week holiday and maintenance closure, unless pulp pickets block the independent mill.

"Anybody can go out there with a board an a sign — where do you stand?" asked a company official Friday when he discussed the possibility of pickets from the Pulp Paper and Woodworkers of Canada or the Canadian Paperworkers Union showing up.

When the Sooke IWA workers return, there will be nearly 500 IWA members still working in the Victoria area as the B.C. forest industry nears a halt with the escalation of pulp pickets.

The increase in pulp pickets came this week after the IWA's narrow rejection of the Hutcheon report on the mainland. But new pickets shut down operations at Caycuse and Cowichan Lake. Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court brought down his mediation report in the dispute last month. The industry accepted it 'reluctantly' but all three unions rejected it.

Other IWA locals on the Island Friday reported "very few men" were still on the job either because of the economic slump, holiday and maintenance closures, or from shutdowns in the first round of pulp pickets that began in July.

An IWA Victoria local official was reluctant to say which independents were still operating because of a fear that pulp pickets might appear at the sites.

He said it was not up to IWA members to decide whether the pickets at independents were legal or illegal.

'We are not advocating our people walk across pickets," he added.

His remarks, along with statements made Friday by IWA president Jack Munro, indicated a further split between that union and the two pulp unions in the forest dispute.

In a statement released Friday by IWA headquarters, Munro said he was "sick, tired and weary" of people outside the IWA taking "potshots" at him and his union.

He said the IWA over the years has shown it had strong trade union principles and had supported other unions in many disputes.

"I would also like to point out that when we are off the job we do not run around shutting down all and sundry just to share the misery," he said referring to the IWA's refusal to join the pulp unions in an all-out strike and the pulp unions' retaliation with pickets.

He said "we have not picketed pulp plants in the past. If pulp operations were shut down and the employees drawing unemployment insurance we would be insane to picket an empty plant and jeopardize those peoples' unemployment insurance."

"We attempted to convince the pulp unions that it would be a wiser position to keep working until we received the Hutcheon report and then go in the same direction at the same time after we had all worked the summer months."

Munro continued: "It seems to me that far too much emphasis is being placed on the expansion of picketing.

"The Hutcheon report is the problem. It is unacceptable and it makes much more sense to me that we should be attempting to resolve that problem."

Jail terms end court test on privacy law

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

The first part of the first court test of Canada's 1974 invasion of privacy law ended Friday in Victoria Provincial Court when Judge William Ostler sentenced two men to 20-month jail terms followed by two years' probation.

The second part is expected to take place early next year in B.C. Appeal Court in Vancouver when defence lawyers Cecil Branson and Michael Hutchison appeal the convictions of their clients, James Archie Hancock, 33, and Gilles Paul Proulx, 30.

Ostler ended is part in what he called "a most unusual case (with) two unusual men" as the accused persons by listing these key factors in sentencing:

- First, both men had no previous convictions.
- Second, a pre-sentence report indicated both had accepted incarceration as a necessary sentence and there was hope they would work while in jail toward a better life after release.
- Third, the report showed Hancock had a good start in life and had become a successful businessman but had failed in both because of alcohol.
- Fourth, the report showed Proulx also started well and was "a man of ability and perception" who could still be a successful law-abiding citizen "if he just makes up his mind."
- Fifth, "the proper centence would have been two years" but the two had been held without bail for just over four months, since their arrest shortly after 10 p.m. April 25.

Ostler had convicted Hancock and Proulx Aug. 25 after a lengthy trial of a two-count charge of conspiracy between April 1 and 26 to rob one store in Victoria and another in Esquimalt.

The case presented by prosecutor J. W. Anderson rested mainly on tape recordings of four phone conversations between the two men in the April 16-24 period plus one tape made by police on the evening of April 25 and a "bug" planted in Hancock's car April 21.

In speaking Friday to sentence, Hutchison quoted several times from the April 25 tape in his claim tht Hancock and Proulx "were not sophisticated criminals ... they were acting in a state of excited bravado ... they were both nervous, inexperienced in criminal behavior and ready to abandon" any plans for crime.

In fact, said Hutchison, "they were already frightened" and were on their way home when stopped in the 400 block Belleville after first abandoning any robbery in Esquimalt and then doing the same in Victoria.

The defence lawyer said the last tape seemed to show "one was propping up the other." He urged their sentence be less than the two-year minimum which would mean the penitentiary, which he called an unwitting "crime college."

Hutchison said both men arrived in Victoria late last year and turned to crime because of desperation at being "simply flat broke."

Ostler told Hancock and Proulx that "you have been very well served by your learned counsel throughout. I cannot think of a case where any accused have been so well served by two counsel. It has indicated what an ornament to the bench they are."

He said Hancock and Proulx "appear as wicked men ... who have set their minds against their fellow citizens by plotting wicked crimes." If they remain so after leaving jail, "all of the potential that you have is wasted and your lives are ruined."

Sawed out, now back in custody

Duncan resident Ronald Glen Westad, 32, who last March 23 became the third man to saw his way out of the Wilkinson Road jail in Saanich, was recaptured this week in Edmonton, Saanich police disclosed Friday.

Indications were Westad might be charged in Edmonton with armed robbery before any return to the Victoria area to face a charge of escaping.

Saanich police said March 24 Westad had sawed through two bars guarding a swing-out window in the jail's maximum-security west wing late the night before. He had been scheduled to appear April 9 in Duncan for preliminary hearing of two charges of break-in and theft.

Both of the other saw users, who broke out in 1971 and the early 1960s, were recaptured and sent to jail on other matters.

Police seek witnesses

Saanich police are seeking witnesses to a near accident Thursday night on Saanich Road near the Town and Country shopping centre.

The incident happened at approximately 10 p.m. and Saanich police are asking anyone having any knowledge to phone the department's detective division at 388-4321.

Composer, wife say 'yes'

Can any marriage survive?

By NOEL OSMENT
Colonist - Copley Service

LOS ANGELES — Composer John Green and his wife, Bonnie, describe thier 32-year marriage as a "test-tube" marriage.

The fact that it survived, they say, is proof that any marriage — if the couple really want to survive — can make it.

Mrs. Green feels so strongly about this, she and a friend conduct marriage counseling classes.

When the Greens were married in 1943, he was already a successful musician and composer, leading a glamorous life as music director for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

His background, he said, was "upper-middle-class, wealthy Jewish intellectual." His grandmother had taught English at Hunter College, his mother had gone to Vassar and Barnard, he had graduated from Harvard at the age of 19, and was a liberal.

In contast, his wife, who was an MGM show girl when they married, readily admits she had just about made it through Los Angeles high-school.

From a middle-class background, she had grown up in Pasadena and Arizona, was tall and atheltic with Nordic features and was completely nonintellecual, she said.

Through the years, Green said he has remained a liberal, while his wife has grown more and more politically conservative.

"For the first 18 years," Mrs. Green said, "our marriage was very bad, but we stuck it out. Now we have something that is very great."

Looking back, she said, "I didn't understand about the sensitivity of the creative person."

As he looks back, Green realizes that he was difficult too.

"An ego drive is necessary for an artist to live," he said. "On a concert day, nothing but performance mattters to me. A loud voice destroys me. I don't want to hear anyone else's problems."

So, unable to understand her husband's artistic drive and unable to match the intellectuality she so admired, Mrs. Green spent her time doing her own thing.

"I got involved in the sports, first playing golf, then tennis and skiing.

"I left my children in the hands of others while I went off on skiing trips."

Mrs. Green said it wasn't until recently that she has a had a good relationship with their three daughters, Barbara (his by a former marriage), who teaches music at Smith College; Kathe, a singer now recording an album, and Kim.

"I missed my children's childhood and now I realize that I am the loser," she said.

In counseling sessions, Mrs. Green said she advises women against having careers until their children are old enough to shift for themselves.

"It is tough to achieve a good marriage when there are two careers," Green said. "It can be done, but that couple must rule out children. Motherhood responsibilites must be primal."

Mrs. Green said that the real turning point in their marriage came eight years ago. The couple was living in London while he did the music for Oliver, and won an Academy Award.

The two years ended in triumph for Green, but it almost meant defeat for the marriage.

He almost walked out and she began working to put the marriage back together..

Even while he was Johnny Green, the bandleader and composer of popular music (Out of Nowhere, I Cover the Waterfront, Song of Raintree Country, Body and Soul), he was interested in serious music. About 13 years ago he began devoting his efforts to light symphony.

"I like classical music that wasn't too serious, but had never gone to many concerts and seldom to the opera with him," Mrs. Green said. "I'd tell him to take anyone he wanted, and he did take some of the most beautiful women around."

In London, she began going to all the concerts with him. "I even attended Wagner's entire Ring 'cycle' and began to like opera," she said.

She disciplined herself to be cheerful and loving when they were together. And she brought herself to the point of honesty. "I was able to tell John everything about me he had never known," she said, adding that she come to realize how selfish she had been and even apologized to her children.

Above all, she said, she and her husband have learned to laugh together.

"We had forgotten how to laugh," she said.

Town population totals four men

'A nice place to live'

By CHARLES HILLINGER
Colonist-Los Angeles Times Service

CLEATOR, Ariz. — The town's total population is four men: two hard-rock miners and the two Tom Cleators who operate the Cleator Saloon.

Cleator is 13 miles by miserable dirt road over hills and through gullies from the main Phoenix-to-Flagstaff highway.

Few ever find the place. Those who do usually come thirsty.

Tom Cleator, 50, who owns the town, and his son, Tom, 21, (his nicknme is "Too"), open the 70-year-old saloon whenever someone comes through town.

It was the elder Cleator's father, James, a prospector from the Isle of Man, who wandered here in 1305 and founded the town. He died in 1955.

"Cleator had as many as 1,000 hard-rock miners, their wives, girlfriends and kids during the boom," said the youngest Cleator.

The boom lasted from 1905 through 1929. Gold, Silver and copper were hauled out of the Cleator hills by the trainload until the Depression hit.

Gene (The Mad Scientist) Darnell, 72, owner of the Grand Tour Mine, has been working his diggings for 40 years and is certain some day he'll hit a rich vein.

"When it happens I'm gonna make the Grand Tour," said Darness, his eyes twinkling optimistically.

Ray Nichols, 54, the town's other miner, is waiting for Darnell to find that rich vein.

"I'm savin' my strength for that big day so I can go to work for Gene," Nichols allowed.

Nichols has spent the last five years in the Cleator Saloon passing the time waiting for Darnell to make his hit.

The two Cleators own everything in town — 16 old mining shacks and the old Cleator school. They rent one shack to Darnell for $20 a month, another to Nichols for $35 a month. The other structures stand vacant, gathering dust.

Best out-of-town customer at the Cleator Saloon is Roland St. Louis, 71, and his burro, Molly. St. Louis owns St. Louis Mining Co., two miles south of town.

For 15 years St. Louis has been digging for gold and silver on his dozen claims. He's never made a penny, but he has a sign posted on his property — "For Sale, $20 million."

"It's worth more than that," St. Louis claimed. "But I'm gettin' up in years and I'm willin' to let it go at a

S.. Louis and Molly come to town toward sundown each day to pick up the mail at the St. Louis Mining Co. mailbox.

The old miner and his burro also drop by the saloon for refreshments — beer for St. Louis and pretzels for Molly, who follows St. Louis into the barroom.

Inside are two Second World War vintage Wurlitzer jukeboxes filled with scratchy records like Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree, Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition and Chattanooga Choo-Choo.

"It's a nice place to live," Darnell insisted. "Everybody knows everybody."

Darnell is called "The Mad Scientist" because he is forever inventing things. His latest effort is a flying automobile, a handcrafted car he is fitting with a propeller.

"So when I strike it rich and visit the big cities I will never have to waste time in traffic. When the highways get cluttered I'll just fly over the jams," Darnell said.

On Saturday nights the town is abandoned. All four residents plus Roland St. Louis take off for Crown King, 14 miles by dirt road, where 100 people, mostly miners live.

"There's a bigger bar up there," explained Tom (Too) Cleator. "And Crown King has women."

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter's wedding is only weeks away. After shopping for a dress until my feet nearly fell off I finally found something I really like.

Well, the dress is causing so much commotion I'm ready to blow my brains out. It's a hot-pink chiffon, closely fitted, a little low in the neckline, but not what you'd call indecent.

Already four people have told me the mother of the bride should wear something "conservative" and not take attention away from the bride. They say it's the bride's day and everyone else should fade into the background.

I say it's my day, too, and I want to look my best.

It took a lot out of me to raise this girl and I don't happen to believe the mother of the bride should look like a washed-out hag. I can't face another day of shopping but I'll pay attention to what you say. Please be on my side.—Swollen Feet

Dear Feet: Sorry, dear, you lost me on two counts—the hot pink and the plunging neckline.

The mother of the bride needn't look like a washed-out hag, but she shouldn't look like a go-go dancer, either. Save the hot-pink number for your next anniversary and settle for a pastel shade cut along conservative lines.

Dear Ann Landers: May I comment on Dr. Chester Ewing's statement that "brown-nosing" is one of the four most terrible words for us teenagers to use?

In my high school classes, "brown-nosing" was applied not to students genuinely interested in learning, but to those who made every effort to display phony enthusiasm towards teachers in order to receive higher grades.

Brown-nosing is laughing hysterically at every dumb joke the teacher tells. It is unequivocal acceptance of every opinion the teacher holds—including his political beliefs. It is staying late after class and pretending to be consumed with the subject.

Brown-nosing reduces education to performances for the teacher's pleasure. It teaches the student how to squelch his individuality. It develops all the subhuman skills people need to support a fascist dictator. As an "A" student, I'm thankful I never had to sink that low.—N.Y. Reader

Dear N.Y.: You sound like the guy (or gal) a lot of people want to sit next to during a tough history exam. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a respectable young woman (age 23) and am dating a young man who has asked me to marry him. I am going to say yes but I need to know something first.

In my freshman year of college I fell madly in love with a fellow I thought wanted to marry me. We had sex for several months. When he suddenly decided he wanted to be free to date others I felt really used. "The Romance of the Century" ended on a very sour note.

What I need to know is this: Is it possible for a man to tell if his bride is a virgin? He has never asked and probably never will, but I'd like to know the answer to my question.—Wish I Were

Dear Wish: The answer to your question is no.

Bus crash kills 15 Pakistanis

RAWALPINDI, (UPI) — A bus crashed into a ravine Friday near Khat, 105 miles southwest of here, killing 15 persons and injuring 45 others.

Authorities said the driver lost control while trying to make a sharp turn, and the bus rolled into a 500-foot ravine.

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Argus long-range patrol aircraft, hampered by fog, failed Friday to find any trace of a Polish schooner which entered Canadian Arctic territorial waters undetected last week.

The Polish embassy was formally told by the external affairs department Friday that the ship had violated Canadian prohibitions to keep out of the Northwest Passage because of ice conditions.

Dynamic Exhaling?

An outline of the latest revolution

Melvin Maddocks

Earlier this year the New York Times, with all the authority invested in it, did a rather terrible thing: it pronounced the end of the Sexual Revolution.

To most magazines and newspapers this was gloomier news than another quantum leap in postal rates. For almost 20 years, day in, day out, the Sexual Revolution has been the old-reliable subject of journalism. And now, just like that, Old Reliable's been taken away, leaving dieting as journalism's last inexhaustible topic.

But wait. There's even worse news. Commenting on the New York Times proclamation, a former senior research sociologist at the Institute for Sex Research at the University of Indiana, William Simon, suggests in the current (MORE) magazine that the Sexual Revolution may never have occurred at all except rhetorically — as an excited but vaguely documented discussion promoted by editors who knew a salable subject when they saw one.

This brings us to the fundamental question: How many of the social, cultural, and moral "revolutions" we keep getting told are What's Happening actually happen as described? How many of them are earthquakes in the minds of bored editors and readers?

Let us take as a test case the little-publicized but thoroughly typical (as we shall see) Nose-Blowing Revolution, which began just four years ago this month when Claire Lee Breething published her small but influential paper on "Dynamic Exhaling."

It was Dr. Breething's premise that every healthy adolescent and adult has a perfectly normal desire to take out a large, crumpled handkerchief from time to time and give a good HONK!

The trouble is, Dr. Breething argued, a tyrannical superconspiracy (which she called for the sake of convenience "civilization") has systematically repressed this natural urge. For centuries people have been made ashamed to give their nose an honest toot — dabbing at it with little bits of lace, sniffing genteely, or even pretending it didn't exist.

The Nose-Blowing Revolution picked up momentum, it may be remembered, when three anthropologists (one from an Ivy League College) testified that the secret of the famous happiness and longevity of the natives of Samoa seems to rest upon one constant: From infancy they blow their noses often and loudly on the largest palm leaves they can lay their tiny hands on.

How much harm has been done by the inhibiting of man's full right to breathe in and out — noisily? The question was no sooner raised than a disciple of Dr. Breething (with doctorates in both psychology and anthropology) wrote a book called "Nasal Aggressions."

Beginning with Neanderthal man and sweeping to the present, the author argued that history would have known 75 to 80 per cent fewer wars if men had been allowed to get rid of tensions by blowing first the right nostril, next the left, then both in unison. His scholarly support has encouraged Nose-Blowing Revolutionaries to coin the slogan: "Explode your nasal passages, not your bombs."

In the interest of human dignity — to bring the furtive, hypocritical honkers down from the attic, up from the cellar, out of the barn — a committee of ex-clergymen wrote a manifesto titled "The Situation Ethics of Nose-Blowing." The Revolution, they emphasized, was not endorsing promiscuous snorting. Nose-Blowing should be a responsible meaningful experience.

Right now two or three potential best sellers are being published that ought to put the movement really on the map — "All You Ever Wanted to Know About Nose-Blowing, and Were Afraid to Ask," "The Sensuous Nose-Blower," "The Joy of Nose-Blowing" (with over 100 color plates).

One day the Nose-Blowers will snap on their TV sets, and there will be Morley Safer asking the First Lady: "How would you feel if you opened your daughter's drawer and found this huge cotton handkerchief?" And the First Lady will say: "I wouldn't be surprised. I might have honked myself if things had been different when I was a girl."

At that point the Revolution will really be over — if, in fact, it ever existed. And the ex-Revolutionaries will not need the New York Times or (MORE) to tell them. For they will have this strange but definite new feeling that they would swap any amount of White House candor on nose-blowing for just a little more openness about, say, the CIA.

Meditation not opposed by RCs

Only if transcendental meditation were presented as a substitute for religion would the Roman Catholic Church oppose it, the calendar of St. Andrew's Cathedral states in a recent issue.

The statement answered a question about what stand the church takes on the practice of this type of meditation.

A course by Victoria's Transcendental Meditation Society is based on the methods of the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi.

It is not a new idea, the calendar states, but just a new approach to the meditation practised in monasteries, seminaries and Catholic schools for centuries.

"To meditate means to think over, to reflect, usually for the purpose of undertaking some action," the calendar says.

Traditional religious meditation is a thinking over, it goes on, and reflecting on one's relationship with God and how this could lead to greater love of neighbor.

To commune with God who is within oneself is basically the purpose of religious meditation. Methods of relaxation and means of cutting off distractions that impede quiet are needed for this, says the calendar.

"Through the centuries, various methods have been tried and transcendental meditation is one means of doing this.

"This means could be used by unbelievers to understand themselves better and determine to live a better, more fruitful life.

"These means could also be very helpful for religious meditation, the answer concludes, before stating that only if it were presented as a substitute for religion would the church oppose it."

Housing landmark

New downtown landmark is North Park Manor Society's two-tower housing development for senior citizens at Quadra and North Park. Fifteen and 10-storey towers contain 158 self-contained suites. Not seen from this angle is new sanctuary of First Baptist Church which is scheduled for use later this month. Apartments probably won't be ready until much later in year. Cost of church-housing complex has risen from original $2.3 million estimate due to inflation. Development was financed by grants from federal and provincial governments and city of Victoria in addition to church's contribution of land.

A defence of the right to life

By Rev Frank Morley

Is suicide or euthanasia ever right?

I had a brilliant friend in college who went on to a remarkable career in the United States. He and his wife joined a euthanasia society.

He had a stroke and was almost completely incapacitated. His wife had a terminal illness. One night they took poison. She died, but he lingered for a few weeks. Was this act right?

The Romans had a saying that if the room smokes, leave it. Seneca and Epictetus claimed that when life is useless it is quite proper to end it.

Pythagoras, Plato and Aristotle held that suicide was a crime against the community. Socrates said that even when a man is better off dead, he should not take his own life.

Stoics approved of suicide though Cicero condemned it. Socrates reproached doctors who prolonged life needlessly in the case of hopeless suffering.

All these men believed in euthanasia. Plato and Ristotle thought that weak and deformed children should be put to death. Martin Luther thought it quite proper to put an insane or deformed child to death since such a person did not have a soul but was possessed by the devil.

Judaism, Islam and Christianity opposed suicide. St. Jerome permitted it in defence of chastity, but Augustine denied the exception. The Christian church refused to bury a suicide.

Protagonists of euthanasia have presented a petition to the United Nations asking for an amendment to the Declaration of Human Rights which would include "the right of incurable sufferers to voluntary euthanasia."

A euthanasia society was formed in Britain with the formidable support of Lord Moynihan, president of the Royal College of Surgeons, and others. A similar society organized in the United States found wide support in humonist circles.

Dr. Alexis Carrel, the Nobel prize-winner, stated, "Not only incurables, but kidnappers, murderers, habitual criminals of all kinds, as well as the hopelessly insane, should be quietly and painlessly disposed of." Dr. Carrel's statement runs the peril of euthanasia as practised by Hitler to rid the state of any kind of undesirables.

VOICE OF ONE

David Hume in his essay on suicide maintained that if suicide interfered with Providence, medical men interfered by unnaturally lengthening life. There are shocking cases that any doctor can relate of the most extraordinary methods used to keep people alive.

Joseph Fletcher recalls the ghastly death of Jonathan Swift over a period of eight years while his marvellous brain went to pieces and he had such dreadful suffering that it took five men to hold him down lest he tear out his eye with his own hand.

Should the dying be subjected to the indignities and sufferings of such lingering death? Have people not a right to die with dignity?

If it be wrong unnaturally to end life, it is not wrong unnaturally to prolong life? Certain theologians like Karl Barth contend that in refraining from the use of a drug, one is really assisting a person to die. He condemns the practice.

Some physicians maintain that the preservation of life must be the sole principle guiding medical practive, including the treatment of those who are hopelessly ill.

Loss of life is not the greatest evil. All of us must die and the issue is not whether to die but how and when.

Reverence for human life must be maintained in a good society. Society shows contempt for human life in the practice of abortion on demand.

The casual practice of euthanasia also is a crime against humanity. However, experimental and extraordinary methods to keep someone unnaturally alive are wrong. Men and women have a right to live and to die with dignity and decency, with the maximum kindness and humanity.

CHURCH CHRONICLE

Area truth centre resumes meetings

Regular meetings of the various groups at Victoria Truth Centre will resume this month.

The men's church will hold meditation services at 12:15 p.m. Mondays at the centre with Rev. Charles Glauser in charge.

The children's church and the senior and junior young people's societies will begin fall meetings Sunday. The first healing service of the season will be at 2 p.m. next Tuesday.

The men's church will recommence meeting at 8 p.m. Monday, Sept. 15. The first fall meeting of the women's club will be at 2:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 18.

The parents' group will meet at 10 a.m. Sept. 18 with Dr. Emma Smiley, minister of the centre, as speaker.

There will be only one Wednesday evening meeting this month, at 8 p.m. Sept. 24.

□

Rev. Tom Wilson, rector of St. Peter's Anglican Church, Comox, has resigned and will be on leave of absence until next year when he plans to enrol in medicine at McMaster University, Hamilton. Wilson was rector of St. Peter's for seven years.

□

Rev. C. E. Lonsdale, after seven years as rector of View Royal Anglican parish, has resigned to become assistant priest at St. John the Divine, Victoria.

Bishop R. J. Pierce will be in charge of the View Royal parish until a new rector has been appointed.

□

As many as half the candidates for ministry in Canada's Protestant churches will be women in the near future, according to a prediction by the United Church magazine Observer.

The magazine reports that of the 53 new candidates for the ministry in the United Church this year, 24 are women.

One third of all students in United Church theological colleges this fall are women, in a church in which, up to now, under three per cent of clergy have been female.

The situation will force the church to be flexible, the Observer says, in arranging pastorates, paarticularly for husband and wife ministerial teams who want to serve either the same or adjacent charges.

Metric change display visits Heritage Court

A display on metric conversion is on view at the provincial archives in Heritage Court until next Tuesday.

The Victoria showing of the federal metric commission exhibit — which is open to the public from 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. each day — has been organized by the B.C. metric conversion committee.

It introduces the metric system through murals, literature and such items as balances, scales and measuring tapes.

The introduction enables visitors to take their height and weight in metres and kilos and to experiment with metric objects. In addition, a number of provincial brochures, maps and other publications converted to the metric system are on view.

There is always an opportunity for discussion and there are no examinations.

Bikers get their kicks from Christianity

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — A motorcycle gang hooked on Christianity?

Such a group does exist and its members are endeavoring to shatter the stereotype that bike gangs are traditionally associated with wild parties and outlaw activities.

The Christian Riders begin their meetings with a prayer, spend several nights a week at church and help motorists in trouble.

The club operates out of Central Gospel Temple and the 11 members have all just recently been converted to Christianity.

"The reason we started Christian Riders," said Ed, president and founding member of the club, "was to reach other people."

The idea for the club came out of a Christian convention Ed attended in Washington two years ago. It was here he met members from the Philadelphia-based motorcycle club, Christian Wheels.

He returned to St. Catharines, eager to set up a club. He approached churches and put up notices around the city asking interested young people to get in touch with him.

In the beginning, there were three members, but by the spring of this year, membership had grown to 11.

Ross, a member for two years, said he had been praying a club of this sort would start up.

"I wanted to hang around with guys who had the same interests. You can imagine how everyone used to laugh at me. They used to call me Mr. Clean."

On weekends the Christitn Riders have runs like any other club. But these runs often take them to schools and churches where they preach and tell others about their conversion.

Most of the members had serious drug or alcohol problems before they joined the club.

Ray, a prospective member, dumped 15 bottles of liquor down the drain after his conversion. Before this he had been a hardened alcoholic.

"I went to jail three times for drunk driving. The last time, I was in an accident and my girl-friend went through the windshield."

When Clyde became a Christian, he had $3,000 worth of marijuana growing in his basement. He threw it out.

"I used to get up every morning stoned out of my mind, grasping for a bottle of wine to clear my head," Ed said.

Brian said that before he became a Christian one of his favorite pastimes was making fun of them.

"I used to hate Christians," he said. "We used to get really stoned, sit around and cut them down. I spent a lot of time doing this."

All the members say when they were converted the desire for intoxicants disappeared and they suffered no pains of withdrawal.

The motorcycle is by no means an unimportant aspect of the club.

A prospective member must have a bike to join.

"Bikers are a different breed of people," said Ed. "They stand up for what they believe in, no matter what."

Retired printer tops chrysanthemum show

Bob Begg, a retired Victoria Press printer who grows chrysanthemums in the back part of his city lot at 2742 Scott, was the major prize winner of the Victoria and District Chrysanthemum Society's annual show Friday.

Begg, who has been growing chrysanthemums as a hobby for the last 10 years, has a greenhouse but says that isn't necessary for raising prize blooms.

Some new varieties he has imported were among the prize-winners. "All the new varieties come out of England," he said later. "No one knows why, but no other country can cross-pollinate them like England."

Begg took the Woodward Stores trophy for highest aggregate in all classes, the Roy Hebden trophy and National Chrysanthemum Society silver medal for highest aggregate in open classes, the M. O. Mayhew trophy for most first prizes in open classes, the Weston trophy for the best chrysanthemum bloom in open classes, the N.C.S. bronze medal for best vase in open classes, and other awards.

Riel plays for U.S. party

TORONTO (CP) — The highlight of Canada's cultural contribution to the U.S. bicentennial celebrations in Washington next month will be the Canadian Opera Company's production of a major home-grown opera, Riel.

With words and music by Mayor Moore and Harry Somers, conducted by Victor Feldbrill with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, and directed by Leon Major of Toronto Arts Productions at the St. Lawrence Centre, Riel proved to be a hit when it was first produced for the Canadian Centennial in 1967. It was so successful it was repeated the following year.

Riel, adapted from John Coulter's epic play, Louis Riel, tells the story of the leader of the Red River Rebellion, his trial for treason, and his hanging in 1885. Bernard Turgeon sings the role of the Metis leader in English and French.

Riel opens Sept. 27 in the Toronto fall season of the Canadian Opera Company and goes to Ottawa for one performance before its gala in Washington Oct. 23 — an event which President Ford and Prime Minister Trudeau are expected to attend.

Major, widely regarded as the country's most rapidly rising stage director for opera, welcomes the opportunity to do the production again. While all the principal singers from the original production will recreate their roles, the new production gives the director a new opportunity to refine it.

The principles of directing opera are the same as directing a stage play, Major said in a recent interview. But the heightened emotions involved in opera and the accompanying music have to be taken into account.

Doctors battle deadly cholera

PATNA, India (Reuter) — Teams of doctors headed for this flooded capital of Bihar State Thursday to stem a cholera epidemic that has killed at least 50 people, voluntary relief agencies said. The monsoon floods, the worst in 150 years, left about one million people without food and drinking water.

Art gallery's new season

Three of 12 new travelling exhibitions from the National Gallery of Canada will be in Victoria in the coming season.

An Edwin Holgate retrospective of 35 works borrowed from public and private collections and tracing his work from before the First World War until the early 1930s, is scheduled for showing at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria Nov. 15 — Dec. 15.

Holgate was the principal figure of his generation in the development of the school of portraiture and figure-painting in English-speaking Montreal.

Tom Thomson's famous painting The Jack Pine is scheduled to come to the gallery April 2-25, 1976. It will be accompanied by a small selection of Thomson oil sketches, slides of works of others who influenced his work or whose works were influenced by The Jack Pine.

An exhibition of drawings by members of the Group of Seven is due for showing in Victoria April 15 to May 15 next year.

From the National Gallery's collections, it will include watercolors, drawings, preparatory sketches and caricatures revealing the great variety of the artists' drawing methods.

Holiday toll one of lowest

CHICAGO (AP) — Fewer than 400 persons were killed in traffic accidents in the United States during the Labor Day weekend — one of the safest three-day holiday periods in the country in 14 years.

Fugitives crushed

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Two prisoners tried to escape Wednesday from Western State Correctional Institution in a garbage truck, but were crushed to death in its compactor.

14 face death in Ecuador

QUITO (Reuter) — Ecuador will court-martial 14 senior military officers for their alleged part in Monday's abortive revolt against President Guillermo Rodriguez Lara.

They will be tried under a national security law enacted since the revolt in which 22 people now are reported to have died and about 100 wounded.

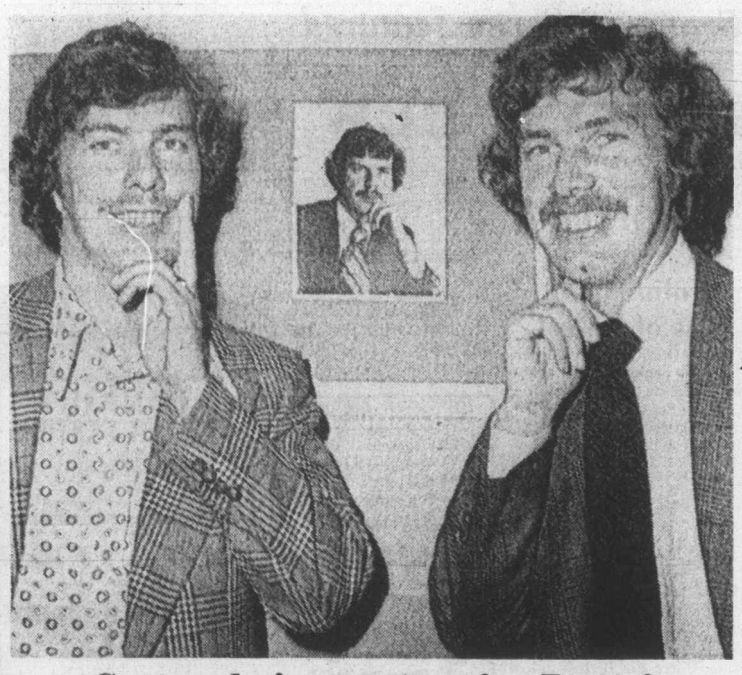
Russian chessmen play third draw

MILAN, Italy (Reuter) — World chess champion Anatoly Karpov and fellow Soviet Tigran Petrosian, a former world champion, played to another draw in their third semi-final match at the Milan grandmasters' chess tournament Friday.

The two have already drawn twice. If their fourth and last semi-final match goes the same way, Karpov will qualify for the final due to a better performance in the qualifying rounds.

In Friday's match, Petrosian played the Queen's Indian defence. By the 29th move when a draw was agreed, they had exchanged all their pieces except for one rook and a knight.

BOWSER MOON AT The Bacchanalia



Guess who's running for Davis?

It's double trouble for the opposition to Ontario Premier William Davis' Conservative party in the constituency of Cochrane South in the Timmins area. One of these identical twins is the Tory candidate and the other is his campaign manager. We won't ask you to guess: Alan Pope, 29, (right) is the candidate. On the left is Graham, the campaign manager.

Republican bill pushes oil program support

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an effort to gain support for President Ford's energy policy, U.S. Senate Republicans introduced a bill Friday to restore oil-price controls through Oct. 15.

But the Democratic majority, increasingly confident of the votes to override a Ford veto and restore controls for six months, blocked immediate consideration of the Republican effort.

Thus, the new Republican bill, backed by the White House, will be eligible for debate on the senate floor on Monday and Tuesday, providing a rallying point for the backers of Ford's energy program of raising prices to force conservation.

Ford has until midnight Tuesday to veto the Democratic-backed measure which would restore price controls through next March 1. With both sides predicting an extremely close margin, the Senate will vote Wednesday on overriding the veto. If the Senate goes against Ford, the house is considered certain to enact the bill despite the president's objections.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Thursday he thinks the veto will be overridden. White House aides are reported to have told Ford they think the veto will be sustained.

The eight-month fight between Ford and Congress over energy policy has centred on the Democratic effort to extend oil-price controls through March 1.

Under the control program, the price of 60 per cent of U.S.-produced oil was held to $5.25 a barrel. The remainder of American production sells at or near the world-market level — established by the Middle East countries — of $13.50.

But in addition to holding down prices, the now-expired law ensured that energy shortages would be spread evenly across the country and that the giant oil companies would not be allowed to swallow up independent sectors of the petroleum industry.

At hearings Friday before the senate interior committee, representatives of farmer cooperatives urged on override of Ford's veto and a brief return to controls.

B.C. landlords want 28% boost

Renters face a 28 per cent increase between this October and next if the Rental Housing Council of B.C. has its way.

The association representing provincial landlords has presented a brief to the Rent Review Commission calling for a 28 per cent increase to be staggered quarterly throughout 1976.

The rent commission is expected to recommend the 1976 allowable increase, if any, within the month to replace this years 10.6 per cent maximum increase.

The housing council's brief also calls for the elimination of anniversary dates so that all rent would be calculated from Jan. 1, 1976.

Additional increases would follow on April 1, July 1, and Oct. 1 until the rent had climbed 28 per cent higher than in 1975.

According to housing council executive director Richard Dolman the staggering of the increases would "minimize the impact" on renters.

The actual increase in dollars paid out over the 12 months would be 17.5 per cent, Dolman said Friday in a telephone interview.

Dolman said statements made Thursday by Rent Review Commission chairman John Brewin that the council wanted a 28 per cent increase in each of five consecutive years were wrong.

"Some details of our technical brief have been misunderstood or misquoted," he said.

"Rent levels would be 28 per cent higher not at the beginning of 1976, nor in any single jump, nor in each of five years, but only at the end of 1976."

Brewin said Friday while he misunderstood parts of the proposal the over-all effect of the council's plan is still "unacceptable."

Dolman said that after landlords received "this substantial catch-up in 1976" smaller increases would be needed in the next four years. He estimated 12 per cent would be required in 1977 and nine-per-cent over the following three years.

Bolman said the increases were designed to "specifically stimulate a massive expansion of rental housing" by closing the gap between economic rents needed in new buildings and those charged for older units.

Dolman predicted that new units with high rents by economic necessity just couldn't compete if older buildings were bound to smaller allowable increases to keep their rents down.

He said no provision had been made in the council's brief to eliminate the unlimited allowable increase for the first five years of any newly-built rental accommodation.

"We are assuming that rent would rise in new buildings no more than inflation," he said.

Pro career all over?

REGINA (CP) — Middle linebacker Charlie Collins, 29, in his fifth season with Saskatchewan Roughriders, has been put on the injured list and does not expect to be able to resume his professional football career.

Referring to a 1974 neck injury aggravated in recent games, Collins said doctors "told me it could get worse."

"I would think this pretty well cinches it. It was going to be my last year anyway."

ATLANTA (CP) — Atlanta Braves traded veteran left-hander Ray Sadecki to Kansas City Royals for two minor-league pitchers, the National League baseball club announced this week.

The deal completed an earlier trade between the teams which brought knuckleballer Bruce Dal Canton to Atlanta in exchange for cash, said Eddie Robinson, executive vice-president of the Braves.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Friday's answer — The real title of the children's poem by Eugene Field which we all know as Wynken, Blynken and Nod is actually A Dutch Lullaby. And it likely will be remembered long after Jaws is forgotten.

Today's question — A Victoria newspaperman named Jim Crerar claims to be an expert on Casey at the Bat. So ask him the name of its author, the place where the game was played and the final score. Had Casey homered, what would the score have been? Answers Tuesday.

"Remember the name — Chef Emilio Bicentennialburgers."

Saturday highlights

NEWCOMERS: The major items are Cloris Leachman's Phyllis at 10 p.m. on Channel 2 and Beacon Hill at 11 p.m. on Channel 7. Channel 2 will also have Gabe Kaplan's funny-teacher series Welcome Back, Kotter at 5:30 p.m. The only new season starts involve High Rollers at 7 p.m. on Channel 5 and Lawrence Welk at 7:30 on Channel 4. But try not to miss Phyllis and Beacon Hill.

CARTOONS: The three U.S. networks start their new seasons for children with 10 newcomers. Channel 4 has Tom and Jerry and the Grape Ape, Lost Saucer, Uncle Croc's Block and Odd Ball Couple; Channel 5 has Waldo Kitty, Beyond the Planet of the Apes and Westwind; Channel 7 boasts Far Out Space Nuts and Ghost Busters, and joins with Channel 12 for the Sazam-Isis hour. Times can be found in the schedules.

2:30 p.m. — PBS repeats Nourish the Beast, a Hollywood TV Theatre comic slash at the middle class—9.

9:00 — Already it's new-season reruns. That Dean Martin special on CTV the other day is rerun by NBC—5.

9:30 — PBS profiles singer Glen Yarborough, and it should be noted tonight starts an another Channel 9 pledge week—9.

● 10:00 Miss America is recommended not because it's worth watching but because you (not me) want to see it. Don't you?—5.

Saturday sport

11:00 a.m. — Baseball, St. Louis at New York—2, 5, 6.

12:00 noon — More U.S. open tennis—7, 12.

2:00 p.m. — The world series of golf with Nicklaus and others—5.

4:00 — NFL exhibition football, St. Louis at Minnesota—4.

6:30 — CFL football, Saskatchewan at Edmonton—2, 6.

Saturday movies

2:00 p.m. — No title available. I concede the movies haven't been much lately but their season starts Friday with James Bond's Diamonds Are Forever and then Cabaret hits us one week from tonight—2.

2:00 — Little Colonel (1935 Shirley Temple). King Lee claims Colonel Sanders is really Shirley Temple grown up—11.

6:30 — McHale's Navy Joins the Air Force (poorish 1965 Tim Conway and Co.). The McHale movie without Ernest Borgnine, and I claim King Lee is Borgnine grown down—7.

8:30 — Home from the Hill (only fair 1960 troubled-family drama), Robert Mitchum, George Peppard, Eleanor Parker, George Hamilton. Mitchum and Peppard act as they usually do and Hamilton doesn't act at all—4.

9:00 — The Man Who Understood Women (1965 romanticomedy, also only fair), Henry Fonda, Leslie Caron. Also on Channel 6 at 11:15 and it's not the Sonny Bono story—8.

11:00 — Dawn Rider (1935 John Wayne no-no)—11.

11:30 — Funeral in Berlin (1966 spy stuff) Only for fans of Michael Caine, spy flicks and Len Deighton—12.

12:00 — Beloved Infidel (truly terrible 1959 Scott Fitzerald loves Sheila Graham), Gregory Peck, Deborah Kerr. For no one at all—5.

12:00 — Phantom of the Opera (amusing 1962 Herbert Lom version). You're a trivia titan if you already knew the Phontom of the Opera's real name was Erique Claudin —7.

12:00 — I Love My Wife (barely likeable 1970 romanticomedy), Brenda Vaccaro, Elliott Gould. In 1970, Gould was the big star; now it's Vaccaro and whatever happened to Goud?—8.

● 1:15 a.m. — West Side Story (1961 Oscar-winning Berstein musical), Natalie Wood and gangs. Recommended only for the music—6.

2:05 — War Wagon (1967 John Wayne). I must apologize to King Lee, who is really the Italian Colonel Sanders —8.

NOTE: No radio worth noting today.

●—Recommended.

'Barefoot king' rejects offer for paradise

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — John Clunies Ross, the barefoot king of the Cocos Islands, has rejected Australia's offer to buy his remote Indian Ocean paradise for $3.5 million.

"Add another nought and that is the point I start talking," he told an Australian government minister.

Clunies Ross has resisted all efforts by Australia to end his personal rule over Home island, one of the string of small Cocos islands 1,350 miles northwest of the Australian mainland.

He has been labelled a slave owner, a colonialist and a racist. A United Nations mission that visited the islands denounced him. An Australian official likened his island to the estate of a benevolent slave owner in the American South before the Civil War.

A descendant of a British adventurer who settled in the islands almost 150 years ago, Clunies Ross is absolute ruler over his 654 subjects, mostly Malays, who call him "Tuan (King) John."

Britain annexed the two Cocos atolls, which cover less than six square miles, in 1886 and Queen Victoria granted the land to the Clunies Ross family in perpetuity. In 1955, Britain transferred ownership to Australia, which maintains airports on West and Direction islands and has a 145-man administration on West.

But Clunies Ross has resisted the Australian government's attempts to extend the benefits of Australian citizenship to Home islanders.

He refuses to introduce compulsory education, unions or the Australian legal system and issues his own currency. The islanders, who earn an average of $2 a week, are paid in plastic tokens (4 Clunies Ross rupees to one Australian dollar) but can spend them only in the company store. Clunies Ross keeps the population low by issuing free contraceptives.

Asked once if he considered himself a Cocos Islander, he replied in his upper class English accent: "No, actually I see myself as an Englishman. I go to England every other year."

His wife and six children live in England.

Explosives experts handle Goliath robot at entrance to London's Hilton Hotel after fatal bomb blast

Seven seriously hurt

Bomb kills two in London hotel

LONDON (AP) — A terrorist bomb exploded in the tourist-packed lobby of the London Hilton Hotel on Friday, killing two persons and wounding 62, police reported.

"It was like the end of the world," one shaken survivor said.

Seven victims were reported in serious condition at St. George's Hospital, where a policeman said the casualty ward "is like a butcher's shop."

There were a number of overseas visitors among the injured, but there was no immediate indication that any Canadians were involved.

The bomb, believed to have been planted in a bag near an airline booking desk, blew up moments after police officers entered the 28-storey, 510-room hotel to clear it following a telephoned warning to a newspaper by a man with an Irish accent.

The bombing was the fifth in and around London in the last nine days. Police refused to speculate about the identity of the Hilton bombers or to link them with the other four attacks. But they said they believe those were the work of Irish Republican Army guerrillas.

The blast Friday raised the death toll from this rash of bombings to three, with about 100 persons wounded.

The Hilton bomb wrecked the recently redecorated glass-and-marble lobby, overlooking Hyde Park and about 600 yards from Buckingham Palace. Hotel officials estimated there were about 100 people milling around when the charge exploded.

Oil price rise little or none this year

WASHINGTON (CP) — Johannes Witteveen, director of the International Monetary Fund, says talks with representatives of major oil-exporting countries have encouraged him to hope there may be little or no increase in petroleum prices this year.

A United States treasury official also agreed there would be no oil price increase when members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meet in Vienna on Sept. 23 to discuss prices.

But if there is an increase, it probably would be a modest one of only about $1 a barrel, assistant treasury secretary Gerald Parsky told reporters Thursday.

Witteveen made his comments at a news conference at the close of the IMF's annual meeting Friday. He seemed to surprise many observers who have been listening to OPEC members saying there will be substantial increases.

Discussions with several officials at the meeting, however, indicate that the apparent difference between the statements of Witteveen and the OPEC members may be explained by the technical pricing mechanisms used by the major exporters.

To begin with, these officials said, there is simply no such thing as a single world oil price. The 13 members of OPEC charge a variety of prices based on the benchmark wellhead price of $10.46 a barrel for Saudi Arabian crude oil.

The officials interviewed said that what likely will happen at an OPEC meeting Sept. 24 in Vienna is that the benchmark price will be increased, perhaps by 10 per cent or more.

But some of the OPEC members would ignore the increase, they predicted, and hold to their present prices.

Others would mark up their prices in line with the benchmark but at the same time, producers with premiums would likely eliminate or greatly reduce them.

The IMF and World Bank ended their meeting with a strong United States recommendation that a powerful interim policy committee, headed by Canadian Finance Minister John Turner, be made permanent.

Edwin Yeo, under-secretary for monetary affairs in the U.S. treasury, had high praise during a news conference for Turner's committee and said it should continue as a central forum for dealing with important international economic issues.

British soldiers added in Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Northern Ireland Secretary Merlyn Rees said Friday more British troops were arriving in the province and some border crossings with the Irish Republic had been closed.

Rees appealed to the people of Ulster to end the growing wave of sectarian violence that has claimed 15 lives in six days.

"Together we can and will succeed. Stop those who claim to kill in your name — they are killing your future," he said in a ministerial statement from Belfas't Stormont Castle, the seat of government.

Announcing that more British troops were arriving in Northern Ireland, Rees added "however big the security forces, they cannot do it alone. They need your help."

He denied claims by Protestant leaders that the government had given immunity to leaders of the provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army. He said no one had been given immunity from criminal charges.

"There are those who say to us: 'Get out and let them get on with it,' " Rees said. "You know, and the government knows, that this would simply be a sentence of death for large numbers of people."

There has been a switch in violence in Northern Ireland this year from bombings to sectarian killings and groups feuding between themselves, Rees said.

Coup try crushed in Sudan

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Forces loyal to President Jaafar el-Numeiri crushed a coup Friday led by an obscure army officer who was wounded and arrested after a tank-led assault on the state radio station, authorities said.

Vice-President Mohammed Baghier Ahmed first said the leader of the coup, identified as Maj. Hassan Hussein Osman, "was silenced forever," which was taken to mean he was killed.

But later the Sudanese news agency corrected the vice-president's statement and said that Osman "was wounded and is receiving treatment at the military hospital in Omdurman."

It was not immediately known how many died in almost two hours of fighting around the station, the army headquarters and the presidential palace.

In a broadcast, Numeiri said the situation was under control. He urged the Sudanese to turn over to police any plotters who fled into the countryside after the coup failed.

He described the attempt to topple him as a "trivial act by officers who couldn't even control a village" and said it was aimed at halting development in Africa's largest country. He said the plotters were in the pay of a foreign agent but did not elaborate and said he would give more details of the coup attempt in a speech Monday.

Numeiri, who came to power in a coup in May, 1969, has provided Sudan's most stable political period since independence from Britain 20 years ago. In July, 1971, he quashed an attempt by leftist army officers to drive him from power.

Hoffa kidnap theory unbacked, car freed

DETROIT (UPI) — The government theory that James Hoffa was kidnapped is not backed up by the facts, a federal judge ruled Friday and ordered authorities to give up an impounded car which FBI agents believed was used in an abduction.

U.S. District Judge Robert Demascio said federal prosecutors must return the automobile owned by Joseph Giacalone, son of reputed Detroit Mafia kingpin Anthony "Tony Jack" Giacalone.

FBI agents seized the car Aug. 8. The most widely touted pieces of evidence developed in the case — a blood-stain and the scent of the missing former Teamsters' Union boss — reportedly were found in the car.

The judge's finding supported a claim by Charles "Chuckie" O'Brien, the self-described foster son of Hoffa who has admitted driving the car July 30, the day Hoffa vanished.

O'Brien, under FBI questioning, said the bloodstains were from a fish he was delivering to a teamster acquaintance. Laboratory tests confirmed it was the blood of a fish. Specially trained dogs reportedly found Hoffa's scent in the car.

U.S. attorneys said they were considering appealing Demascio's ruling.

The ruling said evidence presented by the government to obtain the seizure warrant "is legally incapable of permitting a finding that probable cause existed to believe that a federal crime was committed or that the automobile in question was in any way involved in a crime."

The younger Giacalone filed suit for return of the vehicle.

Demascio's opinion shed light on the FBI's case against O'Brien, lending support to certain facets of the case that had not been commented upon officially.

The ruling confirmed that witnesses said Hoffa was to have met the older Giacalone at the restaurant where he was last seen, and that Hoffa called his wife to tell her Giacalone had not arrived.

It said Hoffa's son, James P. Hoffa, told the FBI "that Hoffa was conscious of the possibility that harm might befall him from his opponents in the IBT (International Brotherhood of Teamsters)."
